Jerusalem's Easter

Dinutron and Penetrometer

Not Wets, or Drys Decide

By Arthur Brisbane

THE RISING of the Prince of Peace will be observed in Jerusalem with armored cars patroling streets and machine guns parked at strategic points.

The different kinds of Christians hate each other, make no secret of it. Among Mohammedans the "Pro-Mufti" and "Anti-Mufti" forces are expected to fight.

While Christians gather to celebrate Easter, Jews celebrate the Passover, and Mohammedans the Feast of Nabi Moussa. They gather at what is supposed to be the tomb of Moses, whom Mohammed borrowed as one of his prophets.

The angels that know all about us and all about religion must be amused as they look down and watch us at this time of year.

Rumania's government forbids passage of Soviet cargoes up the Danube. Russia protests to Britain, France and Italy, and Holland objects to the Danube blockade, well pleased to have Russian goods "dumped" if they are cheap enough.

Rumania, living in the shadow of Russia, may be inviting serious trouble in imitating our boyish financiers who underestimate Russia's power.

They might learn from Thomas D. Campbell of Hardin, Mont., a farmer on a big scale, cultivating 300,000 acres, producing hundreds of thousands of bushels of wheat a year.

Mr. Campbell has directed, for Russia's government, the development of a farm that really is a farm. He has under his direction 30,000,000 Russian acres, that would make a strip 15 miles wide from San Francsico to New York.

And Mr. Campbell says, "The biggest market today for American goods is Russia. And this Russian business would do more to relieve our industrial depression than any other single factor. If we take it now, we shall have it for the next 50 years. It is the only foreign business available for any manufacturing country today."

It is not wise for high-spirited Rumanians or low-spirited Wall Street men to underestimate Russia. The Rumanians might lose their territory and Wall Street men might lose their chance to make money.

Mr. Hoover says the wage scale must be maintained, and it must, unless we want to shoot prosperity to pieces entirely. It should be remembered, however, that the value of wages depends on the cost of living. Mr. Campbell, quoted above, says wages, now greatly increased on the farms, make little difference. The skilful American farmer, with modern machinery, can "seed" his land for three cents an acre. They can't do that in China, with earth's cheapest labor.

In the long run, no foreign farms will compete with American farms in world markets, if farmers operate "industrially" on a production basis, and get from our government for goods sold at home the same protection as other industries enjoy.

Prof. Carl Stejskal of Vienna discovers a food paste that can be rubbed into the skin, keeping a man alive indefinitely without swallowing food.

Of the new food, called "dinutron," six ounces, rubbed into the skin, is enough for one day. And you can take a bath 30 minutes after the rubbing without losing its nourishing effects.

This will discourage hunger strikes in prisons, make possible the feeding of insane patients who refuse to eat, and will be of great value in certain surgical operations, when food cannot be administered.

It is believed that dinutron will also be highly valuable in treatment of diabetic cases.

Different from Vienna's "dinutron" is the German "penetrometer," which enables policemen and customs officials to look into packages and see everything they contain. It is a special X-ray machine, planned to discourage the business of "Nazis" and Communists sending bombs to each other and to outsiders.

John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, says Democrats will win in 1932, if they take "a courageous stand in their platform, particularly on prohibition, as well as on other economic questions."

That the Democratic party will be wet, there is no doubt. Also, no doubt that the Republican party will be, officially, dry.

But wetness or dryness will not decide the election, and neither decided the last election.

HUGE FRAUDS CHARGED IN FAILURE

Grand Jury Findings Believed to Be Against Ten Men Under Investigation

Thirty-five secret indictments in connection with alleged frauds involving failure of the E. E. Gray Co. were returned in Superior Court today by the Suffolk County Grand Jury.

The indictments are believed to be against 10 men and were arrived at following three weeks of testimony presented to the grand jury by Asst. Atty.-Gen. Louis Sawyer.

Three companies, the parent E. E. Gray Co., the E. E. Gray Corporation and the Gray Realty Trust, are involved in the long investigation.

Several weeks prior to failure of the parent organization, Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner assigned his assistant, Sawyer, and Inspector John Mitchell, attached to the attorney-general's office, to investigate complaints brought to Warner's attention.

At that time it was said there was believed to be a $2,000,000 loss through "fraudulent actions and false representations."

In the indictments are allegations of larceny, conspiracy and violation of the blue sky laws.

Asst. Atty.-Gen. Sawyer and Inspector Mitchell were both in court when the indictments were returned to Judge Williams, but neither of the investigators would make any statement.

WOMAN FOUND IN FLAMES

Shrieking with pain, Mrs. Elizabeth Hubbard, 58, of 18 Dana st., Somerville, was discovered in the yard in the rear of her home early today, her clothing a mass of flame.

Thomas D. Cerior, who lives upstairs, extinguished the flames by wrapping the woman in a comforter, and she was taken to Cambrai Hospital, where her name was placed on the danger list.

As a result of the discovery by District Fire Chief Wilfred Young that all doors in the house were locked, with no fires or gas lights lit, police began an investigation.

Mrs. Hubbard's daughter, Mrs. Mildred Pietce, told police she was asleep in the house and was unable to offer any explanation. According to the police, her mother has been ill for six months.

Cerior said he was aroused by the woman's screams and looking out a rear window saw her running around the yard, her clothing afire. Wales believed her dress became ignited in the house as she started to build a fire and that Mrs. Hubbard ran into the yard, the door slamming behind her.

Rockne to Be Made Knight

South Bend, Ind., April 3 (AP)—Knute Rockne is to find his final resting place tomorrow afternoon in the consecrated soil of Highland Cemetery, just two and one-half miles from the campus of Old Notre Dame.

Surrounded by thousands of his most intimate friends and personal representatives of King Haakon of Norway, the land of his birth, the "Rock of Notre Dame" will be taken to the Church of the Sacred Heart at 2 p. m. for impressive yet simple ceremonies and then lowered forever into his grave.

King Haakon of Norway, Rockne's native land, cabled his regrets to Mrs. Rockne's saying he would make her departed husband a knight.

Today and until the cortege takes him for his last earthly journey, his body will lie in state at his picturesque but unostentatious home in Sunnymead, watched over by a guard of honor composed of the boys and men he trained to play, laugh and live so well.

But the last hopes of the multitude of mourners, who passed his bier, were denied. The casket was

LOCK FOR NEXT GARRETT JURY

A precedent for locking up a jury in a non-capital case was found today by Dist. Atty. William J. Foley as he made preparations for a third trial of Oliver B. Garrett, ex-policeman, his wife and Lillian V. Hatch.

The new trial, it is now expected will start May 4. Using the precedent as an argument, the district attorney will ask to have the jury locked up throughout the trial. This the court refused at the two previous trials, which ended in disagreements.

It was revealed that in 1897, William Scollans, a contractor, was tried for larceny from the city of Boston. The jury disagreed, and he was tried again the next year. Again the jury failed to reach a verdict and later the case was not prossed.

But in 1905 the defendant's son, Thomas, was indicted and tried as an accessory before the fact of corrupting a juror at his father's second trial. He was found guilty and sentenced to four or five years in

At the same time, defense counsel for Elliott R. Hathaway, Fall River youth charged with the nurse's murder, began a fight to obtain Galvin's story which authorities of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, by agreement, are keeping secret.

Other developments in the case were:

1—Attempt in Fall River to trace evidence that vanished Wednesday night from Dist. Atty. Crossley's office.

2—Intimation in Providence that the charge against Hathaway may not be first degree murder.

3—Statement of Atty-Gen. McLyman of Rhode Island that Hathaway was not infatuated with Verna Russell and that the girl was killed in an auto or on the ground a few feet from where her body was found in Tiverton, R. I.

4—Continuation of Hathaway's case in Newport court until April 10 while the favorable bill for jurisdiction of the crime continues.

SLASH IN GOV. ELY'S BUILDING PROGRAM DEFENDED IN HOUSE

BORROWING IS UNWARRANTED, SAYS BIGELOW

Cities and Towns Will Gain $3,500,000 on Committee Plan, He Asserts

The first gun in the battle over the public building program recommended by Governor Ely to help relieve unemployment was fired today in the House by Representative Albert F. Bigelow of Brookline, acting chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means.

In a prepared statement Bigelow defended the committee's action in reducing the Governor's $9,400,000 program to $4,000,000, as well as the committee's suggestion that the state tax be increased $1,000,000.

"The Governor's recommendations provided for construction projects amounting to $9,000,000 from current revenue and $8,500,000 from money borrowed on 10-year bonds," the speaker explained.

$5,400,000 CUT MADE

"Your committee's proposals provide for construction projects amounting to about $5,500,000 from current revenue and $1,500,000 from money borrowed on 5-year notes. The actual difference is therefore $5,400,000, or the difference between a suggested program of $9,400,000 and a proposed program of $4,000,000."

Because of the decision to eliminate most of the borrowing, he said, it is necessary to raise the State tax from $7,000,000 to $8,000,000.

Defending the pay-as-you-go system, Bigelow said that system has made available to the State $2,500,000 more this year than would have been possible had the State net direct debt been maintained at the level of 1920, when it was $40,409,000.

PRISON FUND APPROVED.

The committee decided, he said, that any radical departure from the pay-as-you-go policy should not be approved except for very compelling reasons that have been presented.

In commenting on the decision to spend $1,500,000 on the new state prison at Norfolk, the entire sum recommended by the Governor, Bigelow said, the need of this development is obvious because of the "dangerously overcrowded" condition of the penal institutions.

The increase of $1,000,000 in the state tax, he said, will mean but an addition of between one-third to two-thirds of one per cent to the total local tax.

"Not a very heavy burden when balanced against the maintenance of a sound financial policy by the Commonwealth," he commended.

Answering the argument that in raising the State tax the State was taking away from the cities and towns the municipalities through the emergency highway bill which increased the gasoline tax from 2 to 3 cents a gallon, Bigelow said:

"The emergency highway measure just enacted relieves cities and towns of about $4,500,000. This is to all intents and purposes a reduction of the State tax by that amount. In spite of the proposed increase, therefore, cities and towns received a net benefit of $3,500,000."

He declared the committee recognizes the possible advantages from the point of view of unemployment and building costs which a larger program this year might entail.

DEBATE BEGINS TUESDAY

"Yet," he continued, "it feels that these problematical advantages more than outweighed by the maintenance of a sound and conservative financial policy."

In eliminating an item of $750,000 for continuing the development of the Metropolitan State Hospital, Bigelow said the committee was informed that there was $425,000 available at the beginning of the current year which could be used for construction of a building and completion of two units already under construction.

The Governor's budget called for a total expenditure of $83,412,062.55. The total of the committee's bill, including sums already appropriated for emergency work, totals $75,492,072.55.

Under an agreement, the House will not debate the bill until Tuesday. Amendments have been already offered to eliminate the $1,400,000 increase in the state tax, and to restore many of the items originally proposed by the Governor.

PLANES RESCUE U. S. REFUGEES IN MANAGUA

Women and Children Taken From Quake Zone; the Death Toll Growing

Buenos Aires, April 3 (AP)—A violent earthquake, felt during the night in Tucuman province, threw inhabitants into panic. Several persons sustained minor injuries when fleeing from their shelters. No deaths were reported. The tremor was almost violent in Salta, but no reports of damage were received.

Managua, Nicaragua, April 3 (AP)—Leaving behind them scenes of desolation some 200 wives and children of United States Marines were evacuating Managua today for Corinto in Pan-American airway and navy planes.

Thirty-eight persons, including Mrs. James F. Dickey, whose husband was killed, and Mai. Joseph H. Murray, whose wife was killed, were the first to go. They were carried in three Pan-American planes handled by Pilots Moore, Paschal and Turner.

These planes were expected to reach Corinto during the day and the passengers will board the transport Chaumont, bound for San Francisco, and the navy ship Relief, sailing for New York.

LURED BY SANTA CLAUS

It was an inspiring sight to see the grim faces of the little tots responding with smiles when told that Santa Claus was waiting for them in Corinto.

Their departure lifted a load of worry from the minds of husbands who will continue their heroic task of relief and rescue work.

A flurry was caused that midnight by reports of bandits. The whole story was disbelieved by Marine officers who pointed out that Managua was in open country and that never in the experience of the forces in Nicaragua have they been able to draw raiders from the hills. For about 15 minutes, however, the report was received with excitement.

A call to arms was sounded at the Marine aviation headquarters on the outskirts of the city where 200 soldiers were stationed, about 50 of whom were on duty.

BANDIT SCARE IN CITY

The patrols carrying sub-machine guns were ordered on all sides of the field and these kept watch throughout the night. No bandit raiders appeared.

Col. F. L. Bradman of the marines, in charge of emergency work, now reckons the number of deaths at about 2000.

Other estimates run as high as 5000.

The fire, which never had been completely controlled since the earthquake, today was shifted by a change in the wind, and the entire northwestern section of the city was threatened. During the night marines shot two looters caught amid the ruins.

The Marines remaining in Managua are continually reinforced now by details received from outlying sections and are superintending the tremendous task of relief, but in view of the lack of accommodation and possibility of an epidemic it was thought best that the women and children should leave the stricken area.

Relief work now is proceeding more satisfactorily than in any similar disaster of its kind.

LET NUPTIAL BELLS RING

MDIVANI MAY WED SECRETLY

Tomorrow or Sunday will find Mary McCormick, opera star, and Prince Serge Mdivani, in Hollywood, either married or prepared to marry. Word came yesterday that the marriage of the Prince and Pola Negri was ended by a Paris divorce. Immediately the Prince announced plans to wed Mary. A secret wedding is hinted. (Int'l Newsreel.)

Hollywood, Cal., April 3 (AP)—Maritally free and resolved to remain that way, Pola Negri today was enroute from Paris to Hollywood to begin a new career in the talkies.

But her former husband, Prince Serge Mdivani, planned remarriage by Sunday. Received word from Paris that his Negri's decree, sought on grounds of desertion, had been granted, Mdivani announced here he had arranged with an attorney to obtain a marriage license in another state for himself and Mary McCormic, opera star.

"Such a wonderful woman as Miss McCormic deserves a grand wedding," he said, "but this is a sacred thing to me and I do not want spectators, who might be drawn to such a ceremony, present."

A hint that the Prince might be planning a secret marriage in this state was given by county officials, who said they knew of no nearby state where an attorney could obtain a marriage license without the appearance of the principals.

SEARCH TO BE RESUMED FOR KAUFMAN

Hunt for the Missing Man Will Start When Snow Clears in the Maine Woods

Organized search for the body of Mitchell B. Kaufman, Boston rubber magnate lost Nov. 5, 1930, while on a hunting trip in northern Maine, will be resumed soon by his family.

Mrs. Albert Wechsler of 234 Jamaicaway, Jamaica Plain, sister of the missing bachelor, plans to go to Jackman as soon as the woods are free from snow.

Our information is that the snow is still two feet deep in that section, but as soon as it disappears we will make a thorough search," Mrs. Wechsler said.

"While at first we hoped he was alive, lack of clues in all these months convinces us he must have lost his way and perished."

Eager to win the reward of $10,000 which still stands, several expert woodsmen have hunted individually for Kaufman's body. Among the first to start out was Levi Kennedy, one of the two guides with Kaufman's party on the day he disappeared.

KING WILL MAKE ROCKNE KNIGHT

sealed because of the condition of his body, which was mangled in that tragic airplane crash in Kansas.

The pomp and ceremony, so closely associated with his glorious achievements on the football field, will be missing tomorrow afternoon when Rockne's body is delivered back to earth. Most of his friends, thousands of them, will crowd into the old gothic church on the campus or stand in reverence, distant from the services.

Services at the graveside will be said by Fr. Mulcaire.

MASS FOR STUDENTS.

Solemn high requiem mass will be held for the departed leader at the same church at 9 o'clock Thursday morning in the presence of students, who by that time will have returned from their Easter vacations.

Because of the wish for simplicity and brevity, only 1400 of Rockne's closest friends will be admitted to the services at the church and grave.

Such a simplicity and brevity are the wishes of Mrs. Rockne, his grief-stricken but brave widow, and these most intimate to the viking of play and good sportsmanship.

At 2 p. m. Saturday, the body will be removed from the home to the vine-covered church on the campus of Notre Dame, a few short blocks away. There the funeral services will be held, with Fr. Michael Mulcaire, vice-president of the university, saying the brief services. The deacon will be Fr. Thomas Steiner, member of the university athletic board of control, and the sub-deacon, Fr. Raymond Murch, prefect of discipline for the university. The funeral sermon will be delivered by Fr. Charles L. O'Donnell, president of the university.

Six Notre Dame gridiron heroes, including the entire backfield of Knute Rockne's last team, will be their coach's pallbearers.

The men selected are Tom Conley, end and captain of the 1930 team; Tom Yarr, center and captain-elect for 1931; Frank Carideo, All-American quarterback; Marty Brill and Marchmont Schwartz, the halves, and Lawrence "Moon" Mullins, fullback.

KING TO KNIGHT HIM

The public was permitted to pay their tribute to the football chieftain at the Rockne home today, and until it is taken away.

King Haakon provided for his representation at the funeral last night when he cabled the Norwegian Consul at Chicago to attend the services tomorrow, accompanied by a group of six prominent Chicago Norwegians. The king conveyed his deep regret to Mrs. Rockne and Notre Dame and advised that he would knight departed Notre Dame football coach within the next six months.

Mrs. Rockne, although fatigued by her long train ride from Florida, bore up exceedingly well on her arrival in South Bend last night. Today she was surrounded by her mother, Mrs. Hulda H. Jones of Kenton, O., and Rockne's 72-year-old mother, Mrs. Lewis Rockne of Chicago, and others. Her four children, William, 14; Knute, Jr., 11; Jean 10, and Jackie, 5, still didn't seem to realize that their father had departed from life.

South Bend was filled with mourners today and they included almost everyone of importance in America's college athletic world. A call was sent out today to all classmates of Rockne's 1914 graduation class of Notre Dame to attend the funeral.

SAVANT FEARS MORE QUAKES

London, April 3 (INS)—The earthquake that devastated the city of Managua may be followed by volcanic disturbances or additional quakes in the lesser Antilles, which include the American possessions of the Virgin Islands and Porto Rico, according to Dr. A. M. Low, one of Britain's foremost scientists.

"The earthquake that levelled Managua raises scientific speculation on the possibility that it may be followed by volcanic activities in the lesser Antilles within a fortnight," he said.

"The Mt. Pelee disaster in Martinique in 1902 was followed by an earthquake in Quatzaltenango, Guatemala, within a fortnight.

"Going back farther, we find the same relationship between the destruction of Caracas, Venezuela, in 1811, and the eruption of Soufatara on St. Vincent's Island a short while afterward."

Killed by Wolves

Mont Alegre, Portugal, April 3 (AP)—Mariana Ferreira, was killed by Wolves, today as he was going to attend his son's wedding.

TILSON, HARRIS IN TAX FIGHT

Washington, April 3 (AP)—Additional objections to a tax increase were in the air today as the Treasury prepared to raise expenditure money through new securities.

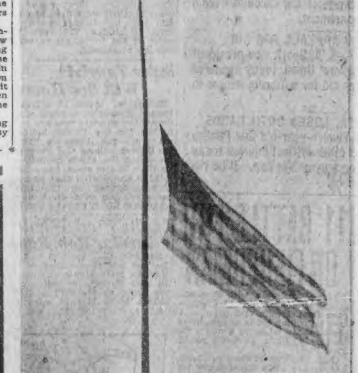
The expected $700,000,000 deficit grew more probable with latest Treasury statements showing income tax collections for March $224,673,000 below those for last year.

House Republican Leader Tilson, after a conference with President Hoover, said he saw no necessity for a tax increase by the next Congress.

Senator Harris of Georgia, ranking Democrat on the Senate appropriations committee, likewise joined opponents of proposed further demands on taxpayers. He said he believed his party would co-operate to hold down appropriations at the next session.

The Treasury expects to issue its new securities by April 15 so the money will be available at the end of the fiscal year on June 20. Besides meeting the deficit, the Treasury has been asked to supply $100,000,000 more for veterans' loans by April 1.

HIS ADOPTED FLAG DROOPS



A huge American flag flies at half-staff today over the empty seats of the huge stadium of Soldier Field, Chicago, where roaring thousands have sat many times and seen Knute Rockne's genius bring victory in gridiron battles.

Many heads were bared in the dense crowd that packed the Chicago railroad station to pay tribute to the great football coach as his body passed through that city on its way to its last resting place in South Bend, Ind. She looked in the mirror and saw smoke shrouding the rear of the car. The gas had ignited. There was a loud report. The gasoline tank exploded.

TWO ASK CHAIR IN JAIL HORROR

Columbus, O., April 3 (AP)—A promise of immediate death in the electric chair will bring a guilty plea Monday from two Ohio penitentiary convicts who yesterday confessed they fired the prison, resulting in the death of 320 convicts.

The prisoners, Clinton Grate and Hugh Gibson, indicted for first degree murder on six counts, told Prosecutor Donald Hoskins today they would plead guilty if he could guarantee they would be sentenced and electrocuted immediately.

"We don't want to go back to the penitentiary. We've been there for nine years and know what it's like," Gibson said.

Asked if he feared other prisoners would turn on them if they were placed in the penitentiary, he replied:

"No, its not the prisoners, but the officials we're afraid of."

Grate said they set the fire to prevent the construction of 48 solitary confinement cells.

"We didn't want to see anyone go in them," he said. "We had no idea that the prisoners would be in their cells when the fire started."

Milton Woman Tells the Court How Secret Marriage Went All Wrong

Testimony showing how a marriage resulting from a Boston University romance was wrecked by the hurling of books and dishes, won a divorce today for Mrs. Gladys E. McKittrick, 23, of Milton.

The 26-year-old husband, Clarence V. McKittrick of Boston, failed to contest the divorce action brought by his wife in Suffolk Probate Court on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Mrs. McKittrick was granted a decree nisi and permission to resume her maiden name of Gladys Estelle Crosby.

Under examination by her counsel, Attorney Earl I. Brown, she told of a secret marriage in June, 1927, at Milton, when both were students.

Mrs. McKittrick testified the marriage did not become known until a month later when the young couple went to live at 116 Sutherland rd.

Trouble developed about two years after marriage, Mrs. McKittrick said, but her bombardment with book sand dishes by her husband occurred on July 2 and September 25, 1930, she said.

On the second occasion, the witness testified, her husband left her after making her a target and had not lived with her since.

Miss Myra Greenlaw testified to being present on the night of September 29 and corroborated Mrs. McKittrick's testimony about her husband throwing books and dishes.

AGED TRIO NEAR DEATH BY GAS

Brockton, April 3—Henry Frye, 73, his wife, Sarah, 75, and Miss Helen Hixon, 72, were overcome early today when illuminating gas, escaping from an unconnected pipe, flowed into their apartment in Belmont st.

Frye was awakened by the fumes and groped his way to the tenement of a neighbor, where police and a doctor were called. He then staggered back and collapsed beside the unconscious bodies of the women.

The aged trio were all revived after two hours work with pulmotors.

Brockton Gas Light Co. investigators reported that a home-made connection resulted in the leak. A dead end pipe left after the home-made fitting had been attached, they said, was plugged only with paper, instead of being sealed with a metal cap. The paper had become dislodged.

ACTRESS CITES RAID IN PLEA

Los Angeles, April 3—A private party at which her husband and an unnamed young woman were clad "only in smiles," was described by Jocelyn Lee, red-haired film actress, when she took the stand in her own suit for divorce from Luther Reed, director and scenarist.

Miss Lee denied her husband's charges of cruelty and set forth that he was the one who was cruel, in addition to being unfaithful.

On one occasion, she said, she accompanied a private detective to the home of a publicity agent in Hollywood.

"We went around the house," she related, "and I heard my husband's voice from the windows of a darkened room. Then I heard a woman's voice. Then I heard sounds of kissing."

With that, she testified, she broke into the house through a window.

Describing the scene when, as she said, she surprised her husband and a girl together, Miss Lee testified:

"I saw the girl's clothes lying on the chair with some silk underwear. I made a dive for them and my husband grabbed them, too. He was pulling and I was pulling.

"I hung on and my husband hung on the other end. About that time a neighbor came in and I went through the house trying to grab some evidence. But every time I'd pick up anything somebody would take it away from me."

'SHINER' COSTS ADMIRER $50

Paul DeDomenici, of the South End, alleged by Miss Madge R. Grey of St. Botolph st., Back Bay, to be a too-jealous admirer, was fined $50 in Municipal court today on an assault and battery charge.

According to Miss Grey, who appeared in court with a badly discolored eye she said was the result of a punch from DeDomenici, when he appeared at her home last Tuesday night as she was saying goodnight to a man friend and struck her.

Later, she said, when she sought redress at law, friends of DeDomenici came to her and offered her $300 to drop the action.

DeDomenici told a different story. He said that he and Miss Grey were seated in a restaurant when another man approached them and started an altercation. He said he knew nothing about the blow which wounded Miss Grey, except that he did not deliver it.

2 AUTHORS DIE IN AUTO CRASH

Bryson City, N. C., April 3 (AP)—An automobile accident today ended the careers of Horace Kephart, 68, of Bryson City, and Fletcher Tarleton, 45, of Decatur, Ga., both authors.

A car they had hired left the highway and turned over at Ela, five miles from here.

R. B. Brown, driver, was taken to a hospital. He said the blinding lights of another auto caused him to lose control of his car.

Kephart, a native of Pennsylvania, had written much on adventure and outdoor life. His books include "Our Southern Highlanders."

3 INJURED IN AN EVERETT CRASH

The women were in Shute st., crossing Lynn st., as Wehner Park, when the crush occurred with the truck, operated by Cecil Squires of Evergreen ave., Somerville.

Squires escaped injury, but his helper, Michael Ellard, 45, of Broadway, Everett, was thrown to the street, suffering cuts on his face.

He and the women were taken to Whidden Hospital, where it was said that the women had sustained possible internal injuries.

NOBLE REGAINS COMPOSURE AFTER TESTS

Lawrence, April 3—Refreshed by a good night's sleep, Russell Noble, held for the hammer slaying of Mrs. Clare E. E. Ellis, Haverhill widow, resumed his jail routine today, apparently fully recovered from the effects of the mental test given him yesterday.

Immediately after the examination, the first of the series to be made by Dr. L. Vernon Briggs, Boston, alienist, and Dr. Clarence A. Bonner, head of the Danvers State Hospital, Noble appeared considerably shaken.

He regained his composure shortly and attacked a corned beef and cabbage dinner, which had been saved for him, with gusto.

According to Keeper Bunting, he does not expect another visit from the alienists before Monday.

No Good Friday religious services were held at the jail, and the chaplain, Rev. Edward F. Miller, devoted his time to the reception of the body of his son, Waldo B. Miller, killed in the airplane crash which took the life of Knute Rockne.

DEMOCRATS MAY MEET IN SAN FRANCISCO

Washington, April 3 (INS)—There probably will be a dozen cities bidding for the Republican and Democratic conventions.

San Francisco, which entertained its first major political convention in 1920, is going to put in a determined bid this year for one of the meetings. Inquiry among Democratic leaders develops there is considerable early sentiment in favor of going back there.

One Democratic leader, a Southerner, declared today his first choice was San Francisco for political as well as other reasons. And he indicated he would be prepared to lead the movement at the proper time.

President Hoover can name the Republican meeting spot, if he wants to. That much is assured.

There is some Republican sentiment in favor of an eastern seaboard site for 1932, and Atlantic City, with its great new convention hall, is being prominently mentioned.

The Republicans heretofore have been rather contemptuous of the financial attractions offered by the various cities, but probably these will receive more serious attention next year.

GALVIN FACES ANOTHER GRILLING ON STORY

SUMMONS GALVIN

His story of the murder night, when he claims Hathaway took him to see the body of the dead nurse, was under fire. While authorities awaited a second opportunity to question him, Samuel I. Jacobs, of Boston, Hathaway's counsel, sought to frustrate attempts to keep Galvin's story a secret.

From his newly opened office in Fall River, he sent a summons to Galvin to appear before him and tell what he knew of events on the night of the crime.

He sent similar summonses to Mr. and Mrs. John Manning and Gene Maligiari, who have been questioned by authorities in Fall River.

The procedure under which the summonse were issued was not made clear. He said the witnesses were to be compelled to answer his questions under penalty of contempt.

AFRAID OF "LEAK"

Elliott's brothers, Dr. Louis E. Hathaway, Jr., and Alden, visited Atty. Jacobs' office. There was also a stenographer with Jacobs.

Massachusetts authorities were expected to attempt to block his plan. Atty.-Gen. Benjamin M. McLyman of Rhode Island, who several times has expressed the fear that Galvin's story would "leak out" and aid the defense, was informed of Jacobs' move and said:

"It is a problem for the Massachusetts authorities. If it occurred in this state, I would meet it and put an end to it."

The cloth belt which yesterday was reported to have vanished from the office of the Bristol county prosecutor is still missing and an investigation is under way to place responsibility for its disappearance.

Detectives Stokes and Ferrari, who found it on Watuppa reservation in this city, believe it may have been worn by Miss Russell the night she met death. They had planned to compare it with her dress, now in possession of Rhode Island authorities.

LESSEN CHARGE

In Providence, where there was a Good Friday holiday, Atty.-Gen. McLyman worked behind closed doors on the case. He made one statement which appeared to be an intimation that Hathaway may not face a first degree murder charge when he goes to trial. He said, in speaking of the murder night:

"If he was a fast thinker, he would have immediately gone to the nearest police station and said to the police: 'Something terrible has happened; come down and see.'"

This statement he refused to elaborate upon, although it admittedly concerned Galvin's relation of what he claims Hathaway told him occurred.

"It is unfortunate that two states are involved in this case," the Rhode Island attorney-general said.

"Dist. Atty. Crossley agreed with me not to divulge the details of Galvin's story, but I fear it may leak on account of the fact several others were present at the re-enactment last night.

DOUBTS ITS VALUE

"It will be unfortunate if it does, because the defense will build up a case to meet it.

"I would like to see the result of Galvin's questioning in Massachusetts. I would like to have been with him and the Massachusetts officers last night, although I do not see what can come of the re-enactment by a witness. With the defendant, it would have been different.

"The girl may have been killed in an automobile or on the ground but in any event she was killed within a few feet of where her body lay.

"Hathaway must take the witness stand at his trial and explain his actions concerning flight. That flight was very significant. To meet the evidence I have he must explain why he ran away.

"He knew Galvin knew that he was with Miss Russell and that Galvin's wife and mother also knew he was with her. Naturally his first thought was to account to them and that is why he told the holdup story at Galvin's house in the presence of Galvin's wife and mother. Then he took Galvin outside and told him the real story.

NO TRIANGLE

"He was with Galvin from 11:15 p. m. to 1:20 a. m. on the murder night. I have evidence that Hathaway made the date for Monday night with Miss Russell by telephone on the previous Thursday. That information did not come from Galvin."

He said there was no evidence of a triangle and jealousy motive. He said he did not even believe Hathaway had been infatuated with the pretty blonde nurse.

"Hathaway was not the kind of a man who would become infatuated with a girl he had known only a short time," he said.

"Hathaway boasted of different girls he went out with almost nightly and what happened to them when he was with them. No, e was not the kind of a man to become infatuated with a girl."

McLyman revealed that he had been in Fall River last night during the reenactment by Galvin of his claimed movements on the murder night. He said he was there following a clue that failed to materialize.

"I went to ask a certain person whether he had been in a car at a certain place at a certain time. The answer was, 'No,' was all he would say.

PRAISES MRS. GALVIN

He reiterated that Galvin had told the Hathaway family early on the morning of March 25 what had happened to Miss Russell and that he had been told at the home of Rep. Louis Hathaway, the accused youth's father, that nothing could be done.

"When Galvin went home from Hathaway's house that night he made some coffee. He couldn't sleep. He finally went to the police and told them what had happened. His wife deserves praise for advising him to go to the police when he did."

The case against Hathaway was called this morning in Newport before Judge Max Levy. Through agreement of counsel, Hathaway did not appear at the proceedings, which constituted an automatic postponement of one week of the preliminary hearing.

By that time Grand Jury proceedings may be underway.

ONE POINT UNDER FIRE

On one point in particular, it is understood, Galvin's story will be under fire. It is why, if Hathaway told him the girl had been saied and attacked by bandits, he and the Fall River man accused of the murder spent a half-hour in a speakeasy before going to the place where they eventually came upon the strangled corpse.

It is why, if Galvin did not already know that the girl had been killed, he did not rush at once to the scene with Hathaway and try to rescue her.

The stop at the speakeasy in this city was made en route from Galvin's home to Tiverton after Hathaway had called upon his friend because he was in trouble, Galvin has said.

CHECKUP TODAY

Hathaway is not supposed to have known at that time that his blonde nurse girl-friend had met death, according to his reported story to Galvin. Neither is Galvin supposed to have known it.

Yet both went from Galvin's home to the gin-joint, bought liquor and spent a half-hour there.

This speakeasy was visited last night during re-enactment of Galvin's claimed movement. Detectives remained in it with Galvin for a half-hour, questioning him.

Today his story of his visit to this place will again be under fire.

Under bonds as a material witness in Rhode Island but not arrested here, Galvin was released by the authorities at 2 o'clock this morning in order that he might get some rest before the investigation is resumed.

After his departure, Dist.-Atty. Crossley said:

"The story told by Galvin during the re-enactment of his actions that night, including the ride to the death spot, has been almost completed. We will check up on his story and movements immediately. The question of jurisdiction is still up in the air, and we are by no means through with our questioning of Galvin.

"He will be further questioned today and we will thoroughly investigate his story for comparison with information which we have gathered from several other sources during the past few days. Galvin is at present at his home with his wife."

The dramatic re-enactment of Galvin's journey to the body of the girl startled the peaceful quiet of Tiverton last night. It had been originally planned to make the trip some time yesterday, just before dark, but certain factors prevented this.

The investigators then decided to wait until shortly before midnight and make the trip, staying as close as possible to the time-table set by Galvin in his original story.

START FROM HOME

The officials declined to comment on what Galvin had told them. They stated it was impossible for them to reveal the nature or contents of his evidence at present as it might binder their probe.

About 11 p. m. the state officers and investigators went to Galvin's home at 272 Belmont st.

The party accompanied by Galvin, left the house at 11:25, and entered a car. Galvin's pretty wife, accompanied by his attorney, Philip Goldberg of Providence, followed in another car. Newspapermen also joined the party in cars.

With the police car leading the way the party, following Galvin's story, headed for the speakeasy. Turning north the autos headed along to President ave. From there they turned to Highland ave. to Prospect st., to Hanover st., to Pierce st., onto Robeson st., as far as New Boston rd.

The police car stopped and Galvin and the officers stepped into an alley, the rear entrance to the speakeasy where the gin was bought.

The party stepped inside and remained here about one-half hour in checking with Galvin's story that he and Hathaway had spent a similar time there.

The party then emerged from the alley and entered the cars. They continued down Robeson st. to Plymouth ave. to Stafford rd. and across the State line. They finally drew up at the north lane of the Winward estate, where 50 yards in, the strangled corpse had been found.

Here it is significant that the state officers bore out the statement printed exclusively in the Boston Evening American last Friday morning. That the north lane of the Winward estate was the first road off the main highway that could be penetrated to any extent by a person crossing the State line from Massachusetts into Rhode Island.

200 SPECTATORS

It was an eerie scene as the police car turned into the lane and drove almost to the point where the girl's corpse had lain.

Off to the left the sombre outlines of the Winward house stood silhouetted sharply against the sky. The lane, its roadbed newly constructed of white gravel, was outlined between the dark expanses of the fields on either side.

Some 200 people had gathered to watch the proceedings. Gathered in small groups they discussed the case. Headlights of the autos outlined many such groups in relief against the blackness.

A large searchlight in the Winward home swept across the lane and fields every few minutes. The same searchlight may prove Elliott Hathaway and Verna Russell were not parked in the north lane at the time Hathaway is alleged to have said they were there.

Newspapermen worked with State police aides and attaches of the district-attorney's office to push back the milling throng. They were finally forced back to the entrance of the lane.

None but members of the official party were allowed to stand within 20 yards of the officials and Galvin. Therefore, it is not known whether his story of his actions there differed in any way from his original story.

The Romances of Playboy Hathaway

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Playboy Elliott R. Hathaway made no bones about his many romances. His life was an open book to his friends and he never tried to conceal the slightest detail of his many conquests. Proud and boastful, his vanity was pleased when others envied him. More of the playboy's "love life" appears today.

Fall River, April 3—Many live for hope but Pinky Hathaway lived for reality.

What he couldn't see or hear or experience, he cared nothing about.

His young life was active and gay with tangible memories of hours happily spent.

He made his girls talk about him even after he left them: and by their talk interest other young women in seek introduction to him and bid for his company.

But if they didn't measure up to the standards of femininity and girlish attraction he set up for himself, the girls were "out of luck." The playboy liked only those girls who "intrigued" and "held" him. When the interest waned the friendship dissolved and the fair companion saw no more of Pinky.

They tell you in this town that the playboy was "hard" on his girl friends. He didn't let them down easily. He simply dropped them. A sort of that's that attitude which dismissed with but the simplest gesture and erased from his mind any thought of the young woman he dined and wined.

Easy going with life, he was easy going with women. They came and they went and the playboy saw and conquered.

"I want to meet her," he would comment about a passing girl.

And no sooner said the meeting was arranged, and the playboy had set another heart aflutter with his Don Juan air.

Cheer was what the playboy had the most of and "being cheerful" was what he liked best to do.

DEFIED DANGERS

His pals assign this credo to Pinky's "obsession" to wear brightly-hued cravats. The gayer the tie, the better he liked it.

Young Hathaway "fell" for young girls who wore intensely-colored gowns. Psychically, they affected the playboy. He responded to splash in dress and splash in temperament.

Girls liked the playboy's fe. lessness.

When he defied dancing partners and "cut in" on their girl friends, they admired and watched him. "Cutting in" was a favorite pastime with Pinky.

When he attended Rhode's ballroom "solo" he never missed securing an attractive young woman to dance with and most always, she became his partner by his "cutting in" and taking her away from the man with whom she was dancing. No one crossed him. He "cut in" and he got away with it. Another method the playboy used to enable the acquisition of prospective dates.

He was "sitting on top of the world" during the past two years, years that crowded his young life with months of feverish activity and hectic romance.

He "lived" romantic young souls and they accepted it without a murmur.

"I'm Pinky Hathaway. That's enough!" he would say.

And it was enough for the girls whom he escorted to places of merriment and excitement; emporiums of frivolity where Pinky "put on the dog" to perfection.

When he casually, but impressively, exaggerated his position in life as the son of an affluent mill owner, he bolstered up the assertion by tipping waitresses $2 and $5.

Girls smiled contentment to have no "rich" a swain as an escort.

"In one act it's just a pittance, you know," the playboy would say, carrying his long A's and English accent to an even more marked degree than usual.

And some young thing, pecuniously endowed with world goods, would sigh an appreciation that made the playboy more indulgent of her than ever.

The playboy wanted to be a "big shot" with the girls. With some he was, with others the delusion was apparent but interesting.

(Like the woman in the shoe, the playboy had so many women he didn't know what to do. More of his romances in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Wales to Visit Sao Paulo

Sao Paulo, Brazil, April 3 (INS)—The Prince of Wales and a Prince George will pay a brief visit to this city today before returning to northern parts after a hunting trip in Parana.

BRITISH DRINK BILL DROPS

London, April 3 (AP)—Figures published today by the United Kingdom Alliance, temperance society, indicate the people of Great Britain spent $55,000,000 less in 1930 upon alcoholic liquors than in 1929.

Nevertheless more than $1,325,000,000 passed from the pockets of the thirsty to liquor vendors and collectors of national revenue, the latter taking nearly $305,000,000.

The largest decline was in spirits consumption, more than nine per cent. Beer dropped less than two per cent. Brewers turned out 612,000 barrels less than in 1929, but 100,000 more, chiefly stout and ale, were imported.

The expenditure per head of population was $31 against $32.50 in 1932.

This Woman Hater Said 'No' and He Meant No!

Geneva, Ill., April 3 (AP)—James Harrington Scott is a bachelor lawyer which may be a significant fact, and he doesn't like women jurors, in the cases he tries.

"It's unconstitutional to have women on juries," he protested to Judge John J. Newhall, when he found five women on a jury, but the court overruled him.

But Scott had five peremptory challenges left and he used all of them to get rid of the women. Then he won a judgment with 12 men jurors.

New Air Line Start Held Up

Newark, N. J., April 3 (AP)—For the third time in as many days inauguration of east-west passenger and mail plane service on the 31-hour National Air Transport route was postponed today because of bad flying conditions.

OPERA WILL NOT DIE—STRAUS

Vienna, April 3 (INS)—As a result of the ever-growing popularity of talking pictures, the number of musical and dramatic stages throughout the world will be reduced to a minimum, but their standard of performances will rise.

This is the opinion of Oscar Straus, world famous Viennese composer who returned recently from Hollywood.

"The public will always prefer a good talkie to a bad play," Straus declared. "And now, through the talkies, immensely more people have an opportunity to enjoy good music, good dramatic work and good acting, than in the past when the theater had no competition.

"But even the best talking film will never be able to displace the fine art of opera, the operetta or the legitimate drama."

BROCKTON FIRE SET; 2 GRILLED

Brockton, April 3—Charges that he and another man were seen running from the building shortly before fire was discovered at 426 Main st., early today, led to grilling of a Brockton police officer and his alleged companion a few hours later. Both denied any knowledge of the cause of the fire.

The fire is declared to have been of incendiary origin. It started in George Heachum's barber shop and spread to the Silent Glow sales office, Angelo Zotas' variety and grocery store, and a chain store, causing $5000 damage.

The charges against the policeman and the other man were made by William Sheehan of 76 Warren ave., and Albert Hogan of Williams pl.

Later, it was said, the accused policeman once arrested Sheehan and also had arrested his brother, Francis Sheehan, who discovered the fire but who did not join in the complaint against the officer.

Negro Kills Sheriff With Own Pistol

Atlanta, Ga., April 3 (INS)—Sheriff Tom Camp of Campbell County was shot to death with his own pistol today by a Negro prisoner in Fairburn, Ga. The Negro fled and a posse of 100 officers and civilians began search for him.

The Negro had been arrested at a filling station. He dashed from the room while being questioned. Camp chased and overtook him.

Spring Cleaning Raids Are Here

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Chicago starts clean-up by raiding its own city hall. That's right. The way to get ox-tail soup is to grab the bull by the horns.

If you want to find sailors you must go to the Navy Yard. It's like carrying coals to Newcastle and finding the dark place is an oil-burner.

If there's something wrong with your town you will discover the apple doesn't fall far from the tree. And that the tree-sitters like apple sauce.

We must consider the source. A new broom sweeps clean but you can knock over more guys with the handle of an old mop. And like a dentist you must strike at the roots.

A lot of towns can follow Chicago's example and raid the municipal works. If you want to run a peanut stand you've got to get used to the whistling.

Chicago's administration claims the raid was political backgammon. That's a game everybody can understand because it's played with dice.

Politics or not, any place is all the better for a well adjusted raid. It clarifies the atmosphere, removes the grease spots and postpones the doctor's visit exactly one day.

We are for more of them. The best way you can see America is to pack a picnic lunch, grow a beard and join a raiding party.

Glove Maker Known in Boston Dead at 75

Gloversville, N. Y., April 3 (AP)—Joseph Bachner, 75, glove manufacturer and senior member of the firm of Louis, Bazmo, Postman, Inc., died at his home today. Mr. Bachner was well known in Boston and New York, where his firm maintained branches. He also was prominent as a banker.

POLICE BALKED AT ACCUSING CAPONE

Chicago, April 3 (AP)—Charges of vagrancy were wiped from "Scarface" Al Capone's escutcheon today.

The prosecutors said they could find no policeman intimate enough with the gang chief's activities to testify to his vagrancy.

It was during his recent trial for contempt of Federal court, for which he was handed a six months' jail term, that Capone had his first appearance in the Municipal court as an alleged vagrant. The warrant had been issued by Judge John H. Lyle, last fall, when Capone was given position No. 1 on the crime commission's roster of "public enemies."

The prosecutors asked leave to file an amended bill of complaint, and when this was brought in policeman Roy Van Herik, signer of the warrant, acknowledged that he could not swear to Capone's lack of legitimate employment and failure to provide for his family.

"Have you found a policeman who can testify?" Judge Frank M. Padden inquired today.

The assistant state's attorney said they had failed, and that evidence within the 15-month statutory limitation was lacking. They moved to dismiss the charges.

Mauretania Brings Ashes of Acrobat

New York, April 3 (AP)—The ashes of Lillian Leitzel, circus acrobat killed in a trapeze fall in Copenhagen Feb. 13, were brought to this country today by her husband, Alfredo Cardona, who arrived on the Mauretania.

At quarantine a plane, sent out by the Circus Saints and Sinners Association—an organization of circus fans—dropped three wreaths from the sky. The ashes will be sent to the home of Cardona's parents, near Long Beach, Cal.

Three Chelsea Men Face Rum Charges

Antonio Tomasian of Broadway, Chelsea; Paul DeAngelo and Joseph Fino, both of Carroll st., Chelsea, arrested by dry agents in that city for violating the national prohibition act, pleaded not guilty in court today. Bail of $250 was set in case for a hearing later.

Terribly Sick From Gas, Acid. All Ended Now!

Mrs. R. M. Converse of Erie, Pa., says, "I was always tired out and troubled with a lot of gas. Every night I would be awfully sick. I began using ACIDINE and it did me much good. I surely am feeling fine now—tired feeling and gas and acid all gone. I am a changed woman."

Just another of thousands who are astonished at the way this new prescription ACIDINE succeeds when other known remedies fail. The reason it is different from other medicines, ACIDINE contains Japtase, which, in laboratory tests, digested 600 times its own weight of certain heavy starchy foods. ACIDINE neutralizes burning acid, soothes irritated stomach and intestinal linings, helps end acidosis.

Eat, drink all you want. When sour stomach, gas, pain, heartburn, bad taste, heavy feeling, short breath, dizziness, belching, nervousness, colds, gassy headaches and sleeplessness trouble you, take ACIDINE. 'RACKETS' COST 18 BILLION

Albany, April 3 (INS)—Racketeering is costing people of the United States between $12,000,000,000 and $18,000,000,000 a year, the New York State Crime Commission declared in its annual report filed today with the Legislature.

"During the past few years there has grown up, particularly in the larger cities, an illegal system of levying tribute from legitimate organizations and corporations and business, commonly known as racketeering," the report says.

"How much this is costing American public cannot be definitely figured, but estimates range all the way from $12,000,000,000 to $18,000,000,000 annually in the nation.

"These figures are astounding and it is the public who pays them. It would seem that corrective measures can be formulated to stop in part at least the racketeering within the confines of the state, but the subject should be investigated, which can be done so that necessary steps can be taken intelligently."

Crimeless Town Is Minus Jail for Vagrant Gang

Coralville, Ia., April 3 (AP)—It would seem that Mayor Edward Kosner was a bit hasty when he ordered the jail burned down recently because Coralville had been crimeless for 25 years.

Tuesday night six vagrants came into town and made so merry with alcoholic beverages that it was necessary to have deputy sheriffs take them over to Iowa City—where there still is a jail.

American Steamer Wrecked in China

Chungking, China, April 3 (AP)—The American steamer Iping was wrecked on hidden rocks in the Yangtse river today, 20 miles down stream from here. She was beached but remained in a precarious position.

The American gunboat Guam stood by to prevent possible onslaughts by pirates. Assistance was sent from Hankow.

AIR PROGRAMS FOR EASTER

New York, April 3 (INS)—A program of Easter entertainment, estimated to cost $1,000,000, will be offered radio listeners on Sunday, it was announced today.

The Eastern programs will open with sunrise services broadcast from Arlington Cemetery, Washington. This will be offered by the Columbia Broadcasting System and is the first time Arlington services have been broadcast.

National-wide broadcasts will be made by the National Broadcasting Company of a sunrise service in the Walter Reed Amphitheater, Washington, with a concert by the U. S. Army Band. N. B. C. will also carry a sunrise service on Mt. Davidson on the Pacific Coast.

Nation-wide hookups will air concerts by the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Philadelphia Orchestra and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. Lily Pons, grand opera star, will make her radio debut at 7:30 Sunday evening.

'GOLDEN EGG' IS LAID IN ZOO

Washington, April 3 (AP)—Zoo officials are pausing before an incubator which houses a pale green egg.

The egg belongs to the only female North American condor in captivity and one of the few of the black birds alive. It will be worth a good deal more than its weight in gold if it hatches.

"And if it does," said Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park, "I think we'll stage a celebration. So far as I know, no one has ever been hatched in captivity and few are being hatched anywhere just now."

The Zoo got its three condors some 25 years ago from California. They were Fledglings.

Lisbon, Portugal, April 3 (AP)—Repatriation of Portuguese emigrants who are returning from Brazil continued today with the arrival of an additional 480 bearing further tales of misery.

'Courtesy Card' Now Replaces Harsh Speaking Cops

New York, April 3 (AP)—The "courtesy card" has replaced the policeman as a means of enforcing the "no smoking" edict in the subway.

The practice has been to have officers stationed about. When a smoker appeared, the officer would speak harshly (perhaps) and sometimes issue a summons.

The new method is to hand each smoker a card. On it is printed:

Army Officers Jailed

Lima, Peru, April 3 (INS)—Prison terms ranging from one to 30 years have been imposed on 29 army officers tried in connection with revolutionary activities.

SAFE-BREAKERS GET $940

Robbers stole a safe in Braintree early today, smashed open and looted another in Weymouth and made an unsuccessful effort to break into one in an East Braintree office. Their loot totaled $940 and in addition they took an automobile.

The safe was stolen from the Ford Motor Co. on Stedman ave., Braintree, from where a new sedan was also taken. The safe contained $600 in cash.

At Richard's Coal Wharf, Commercial st., Weymouth, they got $340 from the safe. At J. F. Shepard's coal wharf, East Braintree, holes were drilled in the safe and the combination knocked off but it resisted efforts to open it.

Have You Ever Thought of THIS?

THAT the bob is here to stay is shown by its popularity among the truly smart. Fashion recognized this fact and designed the absolutely new bob-wear to harmonize with the short haired coiffures. But the new bob must be FEMININE. L. Max, using the Parisian method of clipping, molding, and training, gives a finished effect that might have stepped from the pages of Vogue. The long bob and long haired coiffures are on the wane. The beautiful L. Max permanents mold the hair in soft waves, leaving it silky, with a sensational sheen. You will appreciate the difference between the ordinary and the unusual in Beauty culture if you consult L. Max.

THE new silk mesh stockings are still the leading favorites in the Spring hosiery mode. The reasons are obvious; they can be worn with any costume, they wear longer, do not show rain spots, and they are disturbingly feminine. Noyes Brothers have Holeproof hosiery in all the new shades, including "Drift" that can be worn with either brown or black. Mesh hosiery is now priced at only $1.65. They are also showing a dull sheer chiffon Holeproof stocking, at only $1.25 and one at $1.35. Women who dress with charm and distinction, naturally choose Holeproof hosiery.

Universal Service

New York, April 3—The Federal Radio Commission today granted authority to the American Radio News Corp., to use the call letters WRH for its new high frequency station at Carlstadt, N. J. The Detroit Edison Co. consented to surrender the letters and accept another station designation in order that the Carlstadt station might use the initials of its owner, William Randolph Hearst.

The new station WRH will be used for communications with the Wilkins-Ellsworth transarctic submarine expedition.

Sir Hubert said:

"It will be the first time in history that mail from the United States or any other country has been carried in a submarine to or otherwise posted from the North Pole. The proceeds will be applied to the expense of the expedition."

MAIL CLOSES JUNE 1

Only a "limited" number of letters can be carried, it was explained. All letters and postcards must be accompanied by checks, cash, or money orders made payable to Sir Hubert Wilkins and must be delivered at the expedition's headquarters, 2 West 45th st., not later than May 1.

Those who wish to post letters for a part of the Nautilus's journey may post them not later than June 1. These will be placed aboard the submarine in Norway, and proceed thence to the pole.

"I FEEL BETTER IN EVERY WAY"

So Says Lady of Lynn After Giving Konjola a Chance to Prove Its Merit

The records of Konjola contain hundreds, yes thousands of endorsements, wherein it is told how Konjola brought relief from ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and from rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

MRS. C. F. GROSS

Why go through life suffering, day after day, with headaches, dizzy spells, bilious attacks, and aches and pains? Why not profit by the experiences of tens of thousands who, to their everlasting joy, put their faith in Konjola and were abundantly rewarded? Mrs. C. F. Gross, 155 Union St., Lynn, gives an interesting statement concerning her experience with Konjola, and the Konjola Man at Epstein's drug store, Scollay Square, this city, can cite case after case wherein Konjola won after all else had failed. Don't be downhearted and discouraged . . . let Konjola pave the way for the return of glorious health. Here is what Mrs. Gross said to the Konjola Man:

"I believe I am safe in saying for publication that if sufferers will try Konjola they will get results far beyond their expectations. I know Konjola did wonders in my case. Indigestion, kidney and liver troubles bothered me constantly. I had bilious attacks and dizzy spells, and my stomach bloated with gas after every meal. Nervousness caused me to sleep poorly. I lost weight; became weak, and felt tired all the time. But since I have been using Konjola I feel better in every way. My appetite is good; I sleep soundly, and get up in the morning feeling fine. I am gaining in weight, and actually feel better all over."

You feel like you will never try another medicine? Well, change your mind, for in Konjola you may find just the remedy you need.

The Konjola Man is at the Epstein drug store, Scollay Square, Boston, where daily he is meeting those who come to ask about this medicine. Konjola is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

THE PENALTY of GRAY HAIR

Gray hair—age—slipping. All these unpleasant ideas seem to go together. Yet, it is not at all necessary. Gray Hair often comes to a young head and people who have it are neither old nor incapable. But how often you hear people say, "Why, she has gray hair"—and—she is on the shelf.

This penalty need no longer handicap the woman who uses Canute Water. This is a clear, spring-like water, of wonderful properties which actually restore hair to its original girlhood color. No complicated "color plan"; no danger of getting brunette shade when your hair is blonde. Not only the one kind but the one bottle is enough. It really is surprising what successful, youthifying results it gives.

Apply Canute Water yourself, in the privacy of your own home. Many women in town are doing the same thing; they simply do not mention it. You need not mention it either. Just buy a bottle from any good druggist—and get rid of the "age-penalty" in gray hair. Canute Water is so safe, so scientific and sure that your dealer knows it will satisfy you; if not, he will refund your money. Sold and recommended by Liggetts, Gilchrist's, Houghton & Dutton, Eaton's Drug Co., or your own druggist.—The Canute Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—Adv.

Flowers Are in Vanguard of Style

By ANN ARDEN

FLOWERS ARE ahead in the fashion vanguard this year, reaching the height of success in the clever little turban pictured. Refreshing as spring itself—white violets, asymetrically draped to form loop one side, long line on the other, are the medium from which this confection is fashioned.

* * *

HATS THIS year are more like the former conception of an Easter bonnet. They have that glorified look one secretly has felt always should be part of the hat chosen to top a new spring outfit. Feathers, ribbons and flowers that have been taboo for so long brightly bedeck even the tiniest cap. All the former severity has given way before the tempting blossoming of the new straws.

* * *

IT'S UP to you to find what sort of hat suits you best—there is enough individuality in the millinery mode to take care of every whim. If you can't bear to have your forehead exposed to the public gaze, there are brims. If you like the wide-eyed ingenuous look of cape perched at the back of the head—you have only to choose. And if you want to look quite individual, choose one of these dashing new affairs that slide back of the left ear and dip down over the right eye — simply devastating when worn well.

* * *

STRAWS DON'T go by any of the old rules — they are as infinitely varied in texture and design as it would be possible to imagine. Some are fourth, some are fine, some are shiny and some are dull—take your choice but be sure it fits in with your costume for that is the telling point of the new spring hat.

* * *

* * *

CROWNS are casually shallow affairs that form an insignificant accessory to hang the brim on. As for shapes, small close-fitting models, medium brimmed appear for street and general wear.

* * *

FOLLOWING no set rule—strongly personal—hats can alter a personality throwing into relief certain features, revealing certain contours becoming an exquisite and charming frame for the face.

RUTLAND VETS' HOSPITAL IS TO GET $180,000

Washington, April 3 (AP)—The hospitalization board today announced a priority schedule of construction of veterans hospitals and national soldiers' homes consisting of a score of projects to cost $7,232,000.

The allocations were made under the $20,877,000 appropriated at the recent session of Congress.

Veterans' Administrator Hines, chairman of the board, announced the list saying every effort had been made to give priority to projects that would most readily furnish additional hospital and domiciliary facilities where most urgently needed.

"The matter of allocations under the recent appropriation and other existing authorizations for additional hospital and soldiers' home construction," Hines said, has been the subject of intensive study by the Federal Board since the authorization of this appropriation."

It was the question of allocation that almost defeated the bill on the last day of Congress, many House members insisting Congress and not the board should designate the projects.

In the list of the hospitals in order of priority No. 5 is:

Rutland, Mass., tiling main kitchen, new warehouses, X-ray equipment and addition to recreation building, $180,000.

Bay State Trout Season Opens Apr. 15

Director William C. Adams of the State Division of Fisheries and Game announced last night that when the trout season opens on April 15 this year conditions should be better than ever.

In connection with the opening, Director Adams especially warns that all anglers must make sure to get a proper license from their city or town clerk.

The open season on trout continues from April 15 until the last day of July.

NOW, IF 'I WERE KING OF OLD ENGLAND'

Hereford, Eng., April 3 (INS)

"If I were King I would make London the New York of Europe."

That is what Anthony Hall, pretender to the throne of Great Britain, told an International News Service reporter

"My direct male forefather, Brutus the Trojan, built London; I propose to rebuild it," he added.

"I would demolish all the musty age worn buildings and replace them with skyscrapers. I would build an imperial concourse in the center of London, from which would radiate outwards a number of perfectly straight motor avenues.

"In the past 600 years the population of London has increased 50 times and it is bound to go on increasing. Therefore, the city must be rebuilt and I have worked out a 70-year building program that would make it possible to accommodate a future population of 100,000,000.

"On this task it is possible that half a million men would be continually employed."

U. S. TAX AGENTS IN WAR ON N. Y. RACKETEERS

New York, April 3 (AP)—The federal government prepared today to strike at New York racketeers through their pocketbooks in connection with their income tax payments.

The campaign, it was indicated after a conference between federal revenue authorities and the United States district attorney, would be along the lines of the recent drive in Chicago which resulted in jail terms for Al and Ralph Capone, Frank Nitti, Terry Druggn Frank Lake and others.

A special squad of about 50 federal operatives is expected to begin work in the city early next week to investigate gambling, narcotic and bootlegging, night club operations, protection and pools, smuggling and all activities for which the incomes are not usually reported.

The large bank accounts of policemen involved in the magistrates courts' inquiry also are expected to come under scrutiny.

Attending the conference yesterday were David Burnet, commissioner of internal revenue, and Elmer L. Irey, chief of intelligence in the revenue bureau; Emmet O'Neal, Washington, and Hugh McQuillan, head of the intelligence unit here.

CHICAGO TO USE TEXAS GAS

New York, April 3 (AP)—Chicago housewives soon will be cooking meals with Texas gas.

July 1 has been set as the date for completion of the last link in the world's longest natural gas pipeline project. When the last piece of pipe has been laid natural gas from the Amarillo field in Texas will flow through the 960-mile line to greater Chicago and adjoining territory.

Under the terms of a contract signed by the Continental Construction company, through which nine large oil and utility corporations have combined to sponsor the $50,000,000 project, any delay in completion will be a costly matter to the engineers, Fred Dana and Irwin Tait. Each day's delay after July 1 will cost the engineer $1,000.

New Senator Gains $7000 by Pay Law

Washington, April 3 (AP)—A law enacted at the last session of Congress will cost former Senator Partridge, Republican, Vermont, nearly $7000 in salary and benefit his successor, Warren Austin, to the same extent.

Under the new law Austin's salary began the day following his election Tuesday, whereas under the old statute it would not have started until he was sworn in next December, and Partridge would have continued to draw the salary checks until that time.

STARVES WITH $500 NEAR

Pittsburgh, April 3—While they were pulling Victor Wavinski's body on a white slab among the unclaimed dead at the morgue, detectives found the $500 bonus loan check that arrived for him while he looked in vain for work and starved.

He fell over in the rain the other day and was sent to a hospital. He told officers he lived along the river front and remarked with a sad smile that he'd be all right when he got his check from Washington. A little while later he died. Detectives went to the cheap room and found the letter that came too late.

Today they know Wavinski was a retired United States Marine; that he fought in France.

Officials at Odds on Girl at Speakeasy

Newark, N. J., April 3—Charges that a girl stenographer in the office of Federal Commissioner Joseph F. Holland visited a speakeasy with two prohibition agents stirred government circles here today.

Lewis J. Tutt, deputy administrator, said no more prohibition cases would be taken before Holland unless he fires the stenographer, which Holland refused to do, saying he has no proof she visited the resort.

Police Captain Holt of Nashua Ends Life

Nashua, N. H., April 3 (AP)—Police Capt. Clarence H. Holt, 46, was found dead in a locked room in his home today with a bullet in his heart. His service pistol lay beside him. He had been in poor health for some time.

This morning his wife heard a shot and ran to his room to find it locked. She called the police and they broke in the door.

IF GLIB, CHILD GETS CREDIT

New York, April 3 (AP)—"Bright children—it is Dr. Joseph Miller of Wilkesbarre, Pa., talking—just seem that way.

Dr. Miller has studied 1500 children from the first to the fifth grade under the auspices of Columbia University.

What seems to be "brightness" in a child he said, today, is more likely to be merely gibbass. The children who talk well too frequently are recognized as "bright."

Dr. Miller found that 25 per cent of the children graded as "bright" had only normal intelligence, or less. About 35 per cent of the "dull" children had the same intelligence, but spoke haltingly and were apt to become confused.

NEXT GARRETT JURY MAY BE LOCKED UP

prison. The jury at his trial was locked up for nine days, during which the trial lasted.

Exhibits in the Garrett case, which have been in the hands of the court, since the jury was dismissed, were returned to the district attorney today.

Dist.-Atty. Warren Bishop of Middlesex County may be asked to act on some of the findings of the Garrett jury investigation, the Suffolk County prosecutor said.

This will be done he said, if certain things reported to him be known, are taken place in Cambridge which in Middlesex county are substantiated in further investigation.

It was also his said from another source that framed indictments against Garrett have been withheld, a number of whose figures in the case are under probe.

PROBE STILL UNDERWAY

Regardless of what Bishop Brother, Foley will report to Governor Ely of the matters thus far covered including sum sent by Frederick J. Stevens, it is said, that he received a letter offering $500 that his wife received phone calls about the case and that she talked about the case herself with a Cambridge policeman.

"The investigation is far from complete," said District Attorney Foley today when asked to comment on the startling disclosures of the past 24 hours.

"Until such time as we have finished our investigation I don't care to make any statement on the things under inquiry.

"If certain facts reported to me are substantiated, I will make a report not only to the Superior Court, but to the prosecutor of Middlesex County."

He refused to comment on the report that a certain Cambridge house, which is connected with the jury probe, has been under surveillance by federal agents on suspicion that it was headquarters for a gang running rum into Boston in stolen cars.

STORY GOES TO GRAVE

Important witness, wanted for questioning by Foley, and his chief assistant, Prentiss T. Hall, has not yet been found by officers assigned to the task. He was to be examined with Garrett, Pershing and the jury room during the record 107 hour delay which ended in a deadlock.

District Attorney Foley's questioning of the foreman and clerk of the $500 offer and which caused concern by his subsequent report that the defendants were not guilty.

According to a statement to the press after the jury was freed, he told the district attorney the jurors had agreed but to one of their deliberations but somehow had apparently reached the mind.

He admitted receiving the bribe letter but could not determine whether he was promised $500 to vote guilty or not guilty. He said the letter also contained a telephone number which he could not remember

Washington, April 3 (INS)—Soviet Russia purchased more goods in the United States during the year ending June 30, 1930 than any other European country the Commerce Department announced today

Germany and England ranked next as sources to Soviet supply. Practically half of all Soviet imports came from these three countries. Purchases in the United States amounted to $150,000,000.

FRANCO-ITALIAN NAVAL PACT BLOCKED

Paris, April 3 (AP)—There was a distinct impression in Paris today that the difficulties of the Franco and Italians in completing the naval accord drawn up in the tentative form March 1 were more serious than was officially admitted.

"It seems that a profound misunderstanding separates France and Italy," one expert said

The question of replacement of warships which reach the age limit before 1936 is worrying the Italians, and further they are said to be disappointed that the French naval defense plan expects no great reduction in the personnel that the Italians have asked a share for.

"Why are we, the lords of creation, still muddling along, while the birds and the animals live serenely, blithely, completely?" Archibald Rutledge.

Why, why indeed's the human beast.

Such questions all are asinine
And weighty, in the bargain. We
Are masters of anxiety.
As well as of the sea and air
And thus and that and here and there.
For all the anguish in our voice
We've but to thank the power of choice
Which sets us off from creatures dumb
Equipped with equilibrium.
None of our feathered or out furry

Hout why they fail to get along

MYSTERIOUS WAYE

SYNOPSIS: The respectability assumed by "Half-hung" Simon, now Dr. Charters, Gunman Gryde, now Mr. James, and Manoel Machado, now Dr. MacAdoo, is menaced by John Waye, patient at Charters' nursing home. Waye has gained admittance there and an alibi for the murder of "Spider" Schlitz, threatening exposure as the alternative. When MacAdoo demands of Charters half of the sum Waye says is to be paid in the Lauderdell case, the doctors quarrel. Meanwhile pretty Marjorie Lauderdell continues strangely ill. As the doctors, James and their other evil assistants, debate whether Waye signed the name of a real person to the confession found beside Schlitz, Waye confronts them and admits that he had, but declares he will let the gang hang rather than surrender. After accusing them boldly of their past crimes, he coolly suggests that they turn him over to the police.

CHAPTER 16

Cocksure John Waye

"YOU MUSTN'T be a party to such wickedness," continued Waye, looking at each in turn. "You must be guided by your higher selves. You, Simon; you, Gryde; you, Manoel; you, Fanny; you, Louie; you must each follow the counsel of your heart. Give me up to the police, and each of you be white enough to say, 'The game's up, and this is where I get off . . . oh!'

"Not that you would get off, Simon, when I'd said my little say about one or two dozen small matters in both England and America, Simon. You'd swing, Dr. Theodore Charters—and you know what that feels like, Simon.

Self-Defense

"And what about you, Mr. James?" he continued.

"Me? Self-defense! . . ."

"Ah! Self-defense . . . Giuseppe Fratelli, for example?"

"He got another gun to his hand, under the counter," cried Mr. James.

"He turned from the counter to get what you ordered, and you bravely shot him in the back."

"The man . . ." blustered Mr. James.

"Yes. And the woman who ran screaming from the inner room? You faced her like a man, or rather a gunman, and shot her in the chest and face. The child that came after her? You shot that child of seven—in self-defense, too? . . . Children are rather a specialty of yours, aren't they, Gryde?"

John Waye's eyes blazed as he added softly:

"No, you won't get off, Gunman Gryde. . . .

"And you, Manoel. Accessories—before and after—fare badly in this country. That insurance racket was a nasty business at Santos. All obviously poisoned—and with the same unknown drug, eh? And some bad slidealips in Bahia, not to mention Chicago. I think you'll get 'life,' Manoel, if you don't get death.

"What would they give our Matron when they knew she was Mother Superior of 'The Convent' of unsavory memory? . . . When they found out that our Matron was Prisco Fanny herself, and heard some tales I could prove."

Mask of Evil

The Matron's pleasant face turned to a mask of evil and ferocity.

"D'ye think ye'll live to get safe on to that scaffold?" she asked.

"And Nurse Jones? Why, there'll be a positive scramble for her, when they know she's Louie the Lady who worked on the outside, in her quaint nurse's uniform, and brought more guns to Fanny's 'convent' than any ten of the men put together."

Then suddenly springing to her feet, she darted a hand towards John Waye's face.

"Shoot him right now, Jimmy," she cried.

"Silly, impulsive girl!" chided Waye.

"No, your one hope is to take the greatest care of me, and keep me in a good humor."

"Ring the bell, Gryde," said John Waye.

"What for?"

Studley Called

Mr. James did so.

"When the maid, or whoever it is, comes, tell her you want Dr. Studley," he continued, turning to Charters.

"I don't want him," was the reply.

"No, but I do."

"Look here, is this house yours or mine?" blustered the Doctor.

"Mine, practically," was the reply.

The door opened, and the Doctor's secretary entered.

"Did you ring for me, Sir?" asked the girl.

"Kindly ask Dr. Studley if he'd be good enough to step this way, if he has a minute to spare," said Dr. Charters quietly.

The pale girl retired. John Waye broke the tense silence.

"So, on the whole, Doctor, perhaps you'll all decide to be deaf to conscience," he observed in a conversational, lantering tone. "For you are a lying dog, Doctor," continued Mr. Waye pleasantly. "And you, Manoel, are a smaller, meaner, more cowardly hound. And as for Mr. James, I think we'll call him a foul, obscene and cowardly hyena, and . . ."

Nurse Jones sprang to her feet. "Say, do you three call yourselves men—to sit there and let that hijacker. . . ."

There was a knock at the inner door, an instant silence fell as it opened and Dr. Studley entered.

"You sent for me, Chief?" he said, glancing round.

"Yes, Studley. Our wayward humorist, here, won't be happy until you have joined the circle upon which he has intruded. Now, Mr. Waye, we are busy people."

Not Insane

"Good morning, Dr. Studley," said John Waye. "What I wanted to ask you, is whether you consider me to be insane in the ordinary lay sense of the word?"

Dr. Studley glanced at the expressionless face of Dr Charters. Since the Chief had sent for him, without other message, presumably it was his intention that this queer chap should be given a straightforward answer.

"Most certainly not," he replied.

"Would you say I was insane in the technical sense of being of abnormal and unhealthy mind?"

"I would not," was the immediate reply. "Quite the contrary."

"Thank you, Doctor. Do you regard me as a perfectly healthy man, physically speaking—one whom you'd recommend as a first-class 'life' to any Insurance Company?"

"Undoubtedly," replied Dr. Studley.

"And last but not least, Doctor, would it surprise you if I died suddenly . . . were found dead in my bed here, one morning?"

Copyright, 1931, Frederick A. Stokes Co

Studley's answer proves Waye's cleverness. Perhaps the turn in Marjorie's illness, disclosed Monday, also has a bearing on it.

MORE AT WORK, SAYS GREEN

Washington, April 3 (INS)—March employment figures reported to the American Federation of Labor offer encouragement by showing a normal seasonal gain, but no industry as yet shows a definite upward tendency in employment of more than seasonal proportions, President William Green said today.

He said his reports showed unemployment was still at a very high level with no prospect for more than gradual improvement in the near future.

In the clothing and textile industries, he said, employment gains were substantial, but 25 per cent were still out of work and 40 per cent were on part time

Insurance News-Comment

— By Samuel Lewis —

Brevity and lucidity so often lacking in life insurance literature was refreshingly forthcoming in a statement made to the writer by Harold P. Cooley, agency supervising officer of Moore & Summers, Boston general agents for the N. E. Mutual. Cooley was asked for his interpretation of business insurance. He replied as follows:

Samuel Lewis

"Business insurance is meant to dispose of your business interest for cash when you are through with it.

"To place cash instead of stock in the hands of your dependents.

"To acquire your partner's share of the business when he is through with it.

Although some people call this business insurance, he added, our client prefer to call it "Common Sense."

Further comment to the above explanation is hardly necessary for the laymen to appreciate the modern value of business insurance.

• • •

Important strides have recently been made in the direction of further educating life insurance salesmen, and the increasing tendency on their part of utilising or recommending to their clients the various functions of the life insurance trusts.

The intelligent disposition of policy proceeds left with beneficiaries apparently is now insured through the medium of the life insurance trust which is administered by National Bank and Trust Companies. It is not surprising then to learn that over 300 Boston Life Underwriters are affiliated with the Boston Life Insurance Trust Council. The membership of this council consists of, besides the Life Underwriters, officials of trust companies and national banks who maintain trust departments.

The next gathering of this body will be on April 21 at the Boston Chamber of Commerce, when Mr. Anthony H. Rutgers, an official of the Chatham-Phoenix Bank of New York, will be the principal speaker. The nature of the talk will describe the value of standardized presentation of the life insurance trust.

• • •

The next monthly meeting of the Boston Life Underwriters Association will take place on Friday, April 17, at Ford Hall. The guest speaker will be Abner Thorp, Jr., the editor of the Diamond Life Bulletins, who is also recognized as a national authority on life insurance. Local life insurance men who will speak at this monthly gathering include Vailient Webster Kenny, general agent for the Commonwealth Mutual, and Robert W. Moore, Jr., prominent local general agent for the N. E. Mutual. The meeting will start at 5:45 p. m. and will be open to all life underwriters, although a charge will be made to non-members of the association. The Boston Life Underwriters Association is rapidly increasing its membership, which now numbers over 800 life underwriters doing business in Boston.

• • •

The Insurance Brokers Association of Massachusetts, the only organization composed entirely of insurance brokers holding licenses issued by the Insurance Commissioner of Massachusetts, have undertaken an intensive drive to increase their membership and to extend its influence in behalf of the thousands of insurance brokers in the state, and particularly in Boston. The aims and objects of this association were described by John F. Masters, its president. He hoped to maintain among insurance brokers a spirit of emulation and co-operation, and to stimulate the maintainance of high ideals in the insurance brokerage profession.

Also he explained, he hoped to create and maintain in Boston and the state an association of insurance brokers with invested capital sufficient to command respect and attention on the part of the insurance company's general agents and the Commonwealth insurance authorities.

The president of the Association further expressed the hope to create in the minds of the public a recognition of the merits of his association and its members and made evident by a special symbol or seal representing the highest type of service and code of ethics to prevail in the general insurance business.

• • •

"Would you pay 3 per cent interest for an estate if you never had to pay the principal?"

This question was put to the writer by no less an authority on Life Insurance than Mr. Willis Hatfield Hazard, Ph.D. of Boston. He quickly added he had no desire to sell me any life insurance, but, he said, if every man would ponder over this question just one minute, then life insurance sales would triple over night.

It took me just ten seconds to agree with him and frankly felt relieved that he did not sell life insurance.

U. S. EAGLE FOR FALCON ROLE

New York, April 3 (AP)—Capt. W. R. Knight, lecturer and naturalist, is sailing home to England tomorrow with an American Eagle to which he will attempt to teach the ancient and royal sport of falconry.

Never before, so far as Knight knows, has an American Eagle been carried into the hunt on the forearm of a man.

The Eagle christened Miss America, was presented to Knight by the Washington Zoo. She is awaiting sailing time in a room in a midtown hotel. It's the captain's idea of nothing out of the ordinary to sit in this room and talk with callers, while the Eagle amuses herself without supervision.

Although he has had the bird only a day, and she never before was handled by humans, she's already becoming tame.

She sits quietly on his wrist, staring with baleful eyes at the other occupants of the room. Now and again she spreads her wings and emits a bit of blood-curdling racket.

WAR VETERAN FOUND GUILTY OF CITY RELIEF FRAUD

Mary Lou Adopts the Role of Delight

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mary Lou Thurston, a beautiful and vivacious girl of the "home" type, orphaned by the death of her parents, lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson. The former is private secretary to a publisher, and the latter an engineer. Larry Mitchell, energetic young newspaper reporter, is Mary Lou's pal. Sanderson gets a wonderful business chance to go to the Orient and take his wife as secretary. Mary Lou is to stay temporarily with Grandma Jennings, Clara's mother. Larry is eager to marry Mary Lou and take care of her, but Mary Lou convinces him they are merely good pals and asks him to help her get a job. She applies at the Lortimer's and is claimed by the son of the house as his war bride, named "Delight." Mary Lou qualifies as companion for Travers starts the task of bringing him out of shell-shock.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

By FAITH BALDWIN

Author of "The Office Wife," "Alimony" and Other Famous Serials.

"WHAT MORE natural than for her to think that you were dead?" Dr. Matthews continued to Travers.

"Then, when the war was over, you were sent straight home, still an invalid from your crash, without an opportunity to go to London and find her.

"You wrote to the old address after your return. She had moved away. Convinced of your death, she did not try to trace you further.

"Try to think of her instead of yourself. It is impossible for her to begin where you left off. Impossible! But she is here, under our roof. Your mother has accepted her. She has consented to stay. But you must try and make the adjustment easy for her. Begin, as I told you, at the beginning, with friendship. Come to know one another. I know it is a difficult situation, but a lot of it is up to you. I trust you to see it through—bravely. Honorably."

After a moment Travers held out his hand.

Doctor Arose

"All right, Doc," he said.

Matthews rose, and stood looking down at him relieved and hopeful of the success of his arguments. He had, he knew, Lorimer's word.

"Do you want to see her now?" asked gently.

Lorimer moved his head on the pillow. He was suddenly very nervous; his hands clenched on bedclothes.

"No. No—tomorrow," he said. "I've got to think this out. I've got some adjusting to do, myself." He tried to smile. "Thanks a lot, Doc. Sorry I was such an ass as to keel over. I'm a fine wreck of a man," he went on bitterly, "to dream that any girl, after seeing me . . ." He broke off. Then he said, very gently, rather pitifully. "Please give her my love."

Views Situation

When Matthews had left him he lay a long time thinking, trying to see, as Matthews had asked, the situation clearly. He understood all the implications. But he didn't want to see her tonight, not till he had gotten a grip on himself. It had all been so amazingly sudden. The unexpectedness of it. And walked into the room, listless, bored with life, as it usual, unhappy and—had seen her. The recognition had been immediate. The deep joy and gratitude, the soaring ecstasy which had overwhelmed him had been almost too much to bear. But she'd a shrunk from him, to had looked upon him as if he had been a stranger, a madman. She had not spoken to him, had not even called him by name. And the resultant crushing disappointment, the doubt of her loyalty, the conviction that she'd forgotten vows, embraces, promises, the certainty of her revulsion, had completely broken him. Now that he knew, through Matthews, a plausible explanation for her incredible attitude, her amazing behavior, he was becoming more the equal of it. shock the situation had been to him, and so he must adjust himself. But he couldn't see her tonight. Helpless, wretched, he felt that his world, even his dull, joyless world of the past years had turned upside down. And

HUNDREDS OF CLERGY HEAR CARDINAL

Cathedrals of Catholics and Protestants Centers of Day's Devotions

Impressive services throughout Greater Boston today marked the observance of Good Friday, memorial of the Crucifixion and climax of the Lenten season.

In the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, Cardinal O'Connell opened the day's penitential devotions with the Mass of the Presanctified, and with hundreds of the clergy of the archdiocese in attendance.

Later in the day in the Cathedral, as well as other Catholic churches worshippers flocked to the solemn ritual of the Stations of the Cross and devotions in commemmoration of the Three Hours' agony on Calvary.

EPISCOPAL CHURCHES

Bishop Sherrill of the Episcopal diocese preached at the noonday service in Trinity. In the evening a preparatory Easter communion service was held.

Devotions during the day at the Cathedral of St. Paul were conducted by Dean Washburn and Dean Sturges. Morning prayer and litany, noon to 3 o'clock services and evening prayers were features of the day's observances.

The children's service of the Episcopal diocese was held in the Church of the Advent in Brimmer st. this afternoon. This morning the liturgy of Good Friday was held, and a solemn litany and miserere will conclude the Passion services at 8.

At the Old South Meeting House a group of noted evangelical divines conducted joint services. Among them were the Rev. Nathan Wood, Rev. Seth R. Brooks, Rev. Theodore M. Carlisle and Rev. Samuel M. Lindsay.

CHORISTERS TO SING

The choristers of the First Church in Boston, the Winchester Unitarian Church and Simmons College will sing the Passion according to St. Matthew by Bach at the First Church, Berkeley and Marlboro sts.

Seven ministers participated in the afternoon services at the First Presbyterian chuch. Each spoke for five minutes on one of the seven words spoken by Christ from the cross.

This evening at the Old South Church the Rev. Dr. Russell Henry Stafford will deliver a sermon on "The Tragic Disciple."

GIRL SURVIVES 4TH OPERATION

After a fourth operation for lung congestion at Deaconess Hospital last night, Alice Gibby, 16-year-old school girl, of Boston st., Marlboro, was reported as resting fairly comfortably today.

Complications set in after a tooth lodged for 16 weeks in her lung was removed at the Jackson Clinic in Philadelphia last December.

She had been stricken last summer and for many weeks her illness puzzled physicians, who finally discovered the tooth to be the cause.

Following the removal of the tooth she became weak and it was necessary to have a blood transfusion. Prior to the last operation she was a patient in the Deaconess hospital, where two ribs were removed to drain the affected lung.

DEVOUT THRONG ROME CHURCHES

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL
International News Correspondent.

Rome, April 3—Pilgrims from many lands crowded the 365 churches of Rome today to commemorate the historical anniversary of the death of Christ, annually observed here by the Roman Catholic Church with a series of impressive rites that usher in the dawn of Good Friday and continue until late at night.

Theaters and motion picture houses were closed in deference to Good Friday. The chimes of all religious edifices were stilled, reminding the capital of the seven hills of the significance of the day.

The plaza in front of St. Peter's Cathedral was crowded with visitors. Cardinal Pacelli, Papal secretary of state, officiated at morning and afternoon services.

While the imposing edifices of worldwide fame drew immense throngs of worshippers, hundreds of devout pilgrims well acquainted with the more secluded shrines of Rome offered prayers before altars hundreds of years old. The mecca of these veteran visitors, as in former years, continued to be the modest little building opposite the Basilica of St. John Lateran.

Within its unpretentious confines is treasured the "Scala Santa," or holy staircase. It consists of a flight of 28 marble steps taken from the ancient Jerusalem palace of Pontius Pilate.

6 MONTHS' JAIL TERM IMPOSED IS APPEALED

Frank Deacetis Guilty of Larceny of $23; Laborer With $2000 Held

Characterizing fraudulent applications for city relief as "a villainous thing," Judge Michael J. Murray today in municipal court sentenced Frank Deacetis, a war veteran, of Lithgow st., Dorchester, to six months.

Deacetis, found guilty of larceny of $23 from the Public Welfare Department, appealed and was held in $1000.

The case of Peter Iacobacci, of 78 North Margin st., North End, charged with receiving $203.26 from the city while concealing $2000.56 in a savings bank, was continued to April 13 for hearing. These were the first cases in a drive against jobless relief frauds.

SAVINGS TRUSTEED

An account of $2000.56 in the Suffolk Savings Bank was trusteed by the city at the request of the overseers of public welfare, who investigated the case.

According to the welfare records, Iacobacci filed application for relief with the Chardon st. charity headquarters, December 20, claiming he was unemployed and without means of support for himself and his four children, ranging from one to six years old. He stated that he was a laborer and 36 years old, but could not obtain work.

GIVEN $15 WEEKLY

The overseers voted to allow Iacobacci $15 each week until he could obtain employment. Later investigation by the welfare officials discovered the bank account.

In announcing the proposed prosecution, Corporation Counsel Silverman stated that the "action of the overseers and the law department in this case, at the direction of the mayor, is a warning to all persons that the city will prosecute all cases in which fraud is discovered."

Charlestown Man Held in Bank Theft

John J. Porter, 26, of Lexington st., Charlestown, was held in $25,000 bonds for the grand jury on a charge of participation in the Milton bank robbery, March 19, by Judge Albert L. Avery in Quincy district court today.

James H. Brennan, Porter's attorney, charged that he was being "framed" by the Milton police. Eight witnesses testified Porter was at home at the time of the robbery. Porter was identified as one of the two men who got away with $126 by Charles Maskel and Mrs. Alice M. Moulton, bank employes. Maskel admitted his eyesight was poor and he had to wear glasses. Porter is held together with Fred F. McDonald of Medford.

Lenten Prayer

The Intercessor

'Read Luke 23:27-28, Text, Luke 23:34.) Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do.

At first sight this might seem to apply only to the rough Roman soldiers, who were, of course, ignorant of the character of their victim. But on closer study it is evident that the prayer applies to all who were responsible for the execution of Jesus. It goes to the heart of the scene and is most revealing of its meaning. The innocent is suffering for the guilty, even for those who are causing his anguish. In despite of all, he loves them still and prays for them. No resentment stains the splendor of the cross. Love triumphs over pain and over savage injustice. "He made intercession for the transgressors."

PRAYER: O, merciful Father, on this day when we commemorate the sufferings of our Lord, we pray that thou wilt subdue all anger and hatred in our hearts that the love of Christ may find room. In his name. Amen.

MRS. BURGEOIS WINS POINT

Mrs. Muriel L. Bourgeois of Northboro today won a point in her suit for separate support against her husband, George A. Bourgeois, Atlantic City attorney in Worcester Probate Court.

Judge Frederick Chamberlain overruled a motion by her husband's counsel asking her petition be dismissed, since he is a resident of New Jersey. He also asked dismissal on the ground that there were irregularities in the papers served on him in the suit.

The court's decision leaves Mrs Bourgeois free to pursue her suit against her husband, who, she declares, refuses to allow her funds to maintain her home at Northboro.

FEARED CROOKS, SAYS GUNGIRL

Receiving a tip that the 18-year-old girl with whom he was about to keep an appointment, was carrying a gun, Albert Mastrodomenico, 30, of Dane st., Somerville, had his wife and a policeman accompany him to the private rendezvous last night and a search of the young woman's bag revealed a fully loaded .32-caliber revolver, police allege.

At the Somerville police station where she was locked up under the name of Miss Angelina Zirilli of Cambridge, she first declined to discuss her reasons for carrying the pistol. Later, under questioning, she told Sergt. Daniel M. O'Connell she had brought the weapon with her recently from Italy and that she carried it as a protection against outlawry, which she heard in Italy was rampant in America.

In Somerville district court today Miss Zirilli asked, through an interpreter, that her case be continued to permit her to engage an attorney. Judge Sturdivant held her in $1000 bail until Monday, April 6.

2-ALARM FIRE IN MALDEN

Two alarms were sounded early today for a fire in the three-story wooden factory of Gould & Company, manufacturers of herb products, in Main st., Malden.

Patrolman Abbott Cass was about to pull a duty call when he saw flames in the cellar of the factory. A second alarm was sounded by a passing citizen when nearby buildings were threatened.

The firemen confined the blaze to the interior of the building. The loss was estimated by Malden police at $500.

ROBBER GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

Orrin Lee Taylor, confessed slayer and robber, was sentenced to life imprisonment today by Judge Harold B. Williams in Superior Criminal Court for the murder of Teodor Chychuck in 1927.

Five counts of robbery armed, one of illegal possession of a revolver and one of larceny in the sum of $400, to all of which police say he confessed, were placed on file.

Taylor and a companion, George Van Hoff, were captured by police in January of this year after their pictures had been identified by five victims of holdups in all of which the bandits bound their victims to chairs before robbing them. Several of the robberies were staged in dentists' offices.

Today, by arrangement between Asst. Dist. Atty. F. M. J. Sheenan, Robert Evarts, counsel for Taylor, and the court, a charge of murder in the first degree was dropped in consideration of Taylor's pleading guilty to the lesser charge.

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor at Liberty 4000.

What is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. WERE THE ANCIENT GREEKS DUNKETEERS?

"The Discus Thrower" now believed to be a Dunketeer looking for some nectar to dunk in.

Professor Will. I. Dunkbetter, F.A.S.P.D.* has made a startling discovery.

He says that the Greek statue known as The Discus Thrower isn't a discus thrower at all. He was hurrying to dunk a large pie-shaped cake in a bowl of nectar. Not throwing a discus,

Thus a modern social accomplishment had its beginning. Today's Dunketeers don't run about with crackers the size and shape of a stove lid.

They dunk Royal Lunch Biscuit, delicately and leisurely.

EASTER LILIES ARE CHEAPER

Easter lilies are being sold cheaper than ever by florists this year and the price has dropped 10 cents from that of last year, according to florists, who report a huge sale.

The Faneuil Hall markets are receiving large quantities of duck and goose eggs, used in many homes, in addition to hen eggs, on Easter. Genuine spring lamb, choice hams and fresh spring vegetables are also offered.

Florists report the tendency to purchase groups of two and three lilly plants in place of one. They also find purchasers preferring a little color and adding tulips or roses to their lily selections.

Only one market dealer is handling the genuine spring lamb, although others have the storage Lamb, which sells at a somewhat smaller price. The genuine lamb is retailing at about 10 cents lower than last year's prices.

Many of the hothouse fruits are appearing in the markets and show a somewhat lower trend in prices. Meats remain unchanged in price in general. In the fish line lobsters are lower than a few weeks ago.

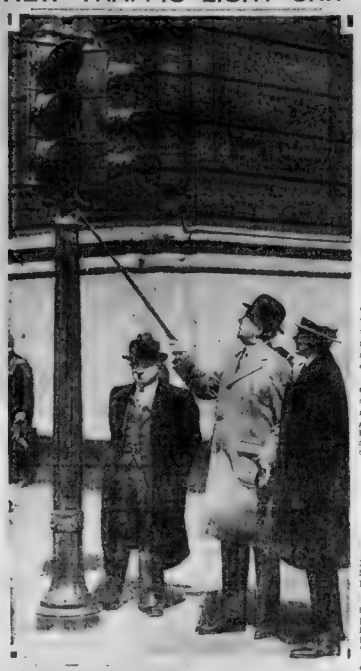
NEW TRAFFIC LIGHT UNIT



PETER A. DONOVAN JOSEPH A. CONRY JOHN F. HURLEY

First of Massachusetts ave. traffic lights erected at Horticultural Hall corner, Huntington ave., was inspected today by Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry, Peter A. Donovan, representing American Gas Accumulator Co., and Traffic Engineer John F. Hurley. The Massachusetts ave. unit of the traffic light system is expected to be in operation early in June.

LEFT THE CITY UNPROTECTED, SAYS MAYOR

Latter, at the Time, Had Attended It and Hoped It Would Be Held Yearly

A Malden police outing last summer, which Mayor William A. Hastings attended and endorsed, in the basis of one of the charges on which his honor seeks the removal of Police Commissioner Artemas B. Sweezey, it was revealed today.

The mayor's endorsement of the outing with the expressed hope it would become an annual feature, was given last October at an aldermanic hearing at which Commissioner Sweezy was completely exonerated of the same charge

It was one of six charges received by the police commissioner and the board of aldermen today, resulting from Sweezy's refusal to accede to the mayor's request that he resign. The aldermen were asked by the mayor to remove the commissioner

The charge reads

"Exceeding your legal authority and depriving the city and its inhabitants of proper police protection on Aug. 29, 1930, by causing members of your department to be absent from the city the entire day

The occasion was an outing of the police department, featured by a three-heat foot race between Mayor Hastings and Commissioner Sweezey, which was won by the police head

At the October aldermanic hearing, Mayor Hastings appeared on behalf of Commissioner Sweezey, praised the outing as a fine thing for the members of the police department, and said he hoped it would be held yearly

The other charges accuse the commissioner of employing members of the police department in private work; of making repairs and alterations on the police station without authority; failure to prosecute violators of the law in certain cases, and exceeding his authority by appointing an officer in excess of the number provided by city ordinance

JIMMY HEADS FOR HOME

5 OFFICERS ARE COMMENDED

Commissioner Hultman commended five patrolmen for efficient work and punished another for infraction of police rules in a general order today.

Patrolmen John G. Barrett, Jr., and Andrew E. Connolly of the Milk street station were commended for capture of three alleged holdup men in Scollay sq. on March 17

Joseph F. Devoe and Francis C Coleman of the Roxbury Crossing station were given commendations for capture of a man in an attempted holdup in Ruggles st.

Accepting the recommendation of a trial board, Commissioner Hultman ordered Patrolman Frank A. White of the Dudley st. station to perform 70 hours punishment duty. White was charged with creating an unfriendly feeling among members of the department by failing to pay a note which another officer had endorsed.

Nears the Top

George Holland, who gave up his newspaper position in Boston eight years ago to seek a career in the theater, has returned an author, playwright and producer.

HOLLAND HOME FOR OWN PLAY

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Well, here's a chance for those who knew George Holland when he was a Hub newspaperman, when he was manager of the Fine Arts Theater and author of a revolutionary idea to bring the theater within the reach of everyone, to pass the word around that Boston's George made good. He's author, playwright and producer!

Holland came home yesterday to greet old friends and to go to Boston. The Patch,' a smart social comedy to be presented at the Plymouth Theater April 13 by Greg Kearney, wrote the play but Holland is putting it across. Before he knew the premier, 'In the Fall 'The Patch' will be presented in New York

FAMILY IN HOLLYWOOD

When young Holland was singled out incidental prominence by wedding Dwosh Nolan, one of the beautiful Nolan girls of Broadway and a sister of Mrs. George Cohan, tells you that a complete lack of sympathy between Broadway and Hollywood exists, believe him

His wife and three youngsters, Jane, eight; George, six and Nancy, four, are now in Beverly Hills

OWN PLAY READY

Holland has just completed "Front Money," whose central figure, incidentally, is a Boston stock broker, "the smartest stock chiseler in the business." A departure from orthodox dramatic technique, and Holland was always known for such departures "Front Money," which goes into rehearsal in New York Sept. 1, has for its cast a series of characters none of whom elicits a particular amount of sympathy.

Eight years ago, when Holland was "at home" with his mother Mrs. Isabelle Holland, who writes for the Boston Post under the name of "Paula Patterson," he worked as a reporter on the Boston Evening American.

The first signal post and other apparatus of the Back Bay unit of the Boston traffic light system were put in place today at Huntington and Massachusetts aves.

The lights will not flash lines until the unit is complete in June, but Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry made it the occasion for an inspection under the guidance of Traffic Engineer John F. Hurley.

The Back Bay system, known as unit two, will have lights along Massachusetts ave. from Tremont st to Harvard bridge. More than half the underground work has been finished.

The control board will be at fire alarm headquarters in the Fenway The board, designed by Engineer Hurley, has several new features and will permit tying in the unit with other signals to be erected later in the South End and Back Bay.

LINCOLN BOOKS FOR HARVARD

A six-volume set of Shakespeare's works, from one volume of which Abraham Lincoln read parts of "Macbeth" aloud from the deck of the River Queen five days before his assassination, has been presented to the Harvard College library.

The present was made by Charles Moore, 73, to whom Mrs. Mary Harlan Lincoln, widow of Robert Todd Lincoln, gave the set. Mrs. Lincoln was one of those present—she was then affianced to the President's son—on board the steamship as it returned from City Point, Va., to Washington.

The set of Shakespeare had been presented to Mrs. Lincoln, for the President, by H. A. Risley of the Treasury Department, a friend of Lincoln's private secretary, W. O Stoddard.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

Girl's Love Scheme

MARY HAD reached the most important decision of her life. And as she sat under the pink rays of a lamp in the living room it was easy to be seen that the decision was not a pleasant one. Mary was pale; there was a suspicious redness about her eyes. Now and then her glance strayed to a small white velvet box on the end table.

The jingle of the door bell startled her, but she pulled herself together, hastened to the door, admitted Roy. Roy, tall, debonair, smiling, self-satisfied, entered breezily. He reached to take Mary in his arms. But she drew back. Roy's smile faded.

"Sit down, please, Roy," she said very solemnly.

"Why, what's wrong?" he asked earnestly.

"Everything," answered Mary.

"Roy, we have come to the parting of the ways."

"You mean—?" ventured Roy.

"I mean, Roy, that—we've been engaged two years—two years I've waited for you to do something, to get somewhere—and you haven't. Frankly, I don't think you will, just puttering around that aviation field. You know you're not—making enough to support me. Yet you seem to go cheerfully on, contented as we are. I had hoped that long before this we would be—"

Roy arose. Made a protesting gesture. Meeting the interruption. Mary picked up the tiny plush box from the table—handed it to him. Roy took it speechlessly.

"This must be a nightmare—I'll surely wake up," he muttered. But as his troubled eyes looked again upon Mary he realized it was only too true.

Roy thrust the little box savagely into his pocket. He took a step toward her, his brow wrinkled with emotion. He was about to break into angry protest when Mary put up her hand as footsteps were heard in the adjoining room. There appeared in the doorway a tall young man with wavy blond hair, straight as a cadet, a young man who fairly exhaled efficiency. Mary gave him a significant glance as she turned again to Roy.

"This is Mr. Ralph Strong," she said. "Ralph, I want you to meet Mr. Roy Morse—a—a very dear friend of mine."

They bowed to each other politely, although Roy shot a look of jealousy at the newcomer, while Mary, at the point of tears which she was striving bravely to hide, chattered on to ease the tense situation. "Ralph comes from Silver Lake," she said. He's the captain of industry in that section—owns the sawmill, the light plant and a string of garages through the little mountain towns."

"Pardon me," he said desperately, "but I'll have to be going. He seized his hat and coat. "Good-by, Mary," he said, pausing a moment, and "Good evening to you, Mr. Strong." Roy strode to the door and let himself out without another word.

As the door slammed Ralph turned to Mary. "You're playing with fire, I think, Cousin Mary," he said. "I don't like your scheme at all, but you would drag me into it. He seems to be a mighty fine chap."

"I had to do something," protested Mary, dabbing her eyes. "It was like a major operation, I know, but I had to do it. Please don't scold me, Ralph. If you had been drifting as long as I have you'd get desperate, too. If it doesn't work—why it won't, that's all," and Mary sighed.

* * *

If Mary had ever expected that Roy would come crawling back to her she was disappointed. One, two, nine months passed and never a word she heard.

Meanwhile, at the flying field, Roy Morse, the jovial youngster whom everybody liked, had become a serious, aphinkie young man, pursuing his own silent course, tireless in his efforts, devoting night hours in the shop off the aviation ground, where the head of an experimental company had given him full swing to work on certain ideas.

Having achieved the first model of his invention, he decided he was entitled to one free day—and he weakened at last. He went to the phone, called Mary's house number. Her Aunt Millie answered. To his query: "Where's Mary?" came the reply:

Five minutes later he rushed into a hangar, pale and excited. "I've got to have a ship, Bob!" he cried. "It's a matter of life and death."

After looking keenly at Roy's face, Bob asked no questions. "Against the rules, buddy," he said, "but I'll take a chance—here's mine. Where you headed for?"

"Silver Lake," said Roy. "Let me see your map, Bob."

* * *

Summoned by Raph's mother, Mary came into the living room of the pretty home at Silver Lake and drew back at the sight of the begrimed young man in flier's garb.

"Mary!" he cried, "Mary! I've come back. It isn't too late, is it, Mary?"

"Too late for what, Roy?" she asked, trembling as tears welled into her eyes.

"You do love me, Mary," he went on eagerly. "I know you do. You'll call off this wedding, won't you, dear? I've made good, Mary, honestly, I've made good."

"Call off the wedding?" repeated Mary. "Why should I? It's Cousin Ralph who is getting married—and I'm only a bridesmaid."

What's in Fashion Today

By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, April 3—Suppose it's cold on next Sunday—Easter! What's the fashionable woman going to do then to make herself look as new and sprinkle as she wants to look on that day?

Even if you do find it's too cold to wear your new spring coat on Easter, you can still look now and different. Some of fashion's very best spring ideas seem to have been designed for just such an emergency.

Take that extremely important part of the Easter costume—the hat. A new hat for Easter is traditional. And there are plenty of new spring hats that can be worn with a winter coat and look springlike just the same.

Not one of the newest, wide, flared-brimmed ones, of course. The brim won't fit well in the big collar that winter coats had. But one of the new brimless ones will fit one with a brim turned up like a cuff. They're so different from the hats of winter that anybody'd know they were new.

Agnes Turban

There's the little Agnes turban, for example. Close-fitting, brimless, with a roll over two or three—along the edge like a frame. Or a band of flowers that gives the same frame effect.

We've had one sketched on the left hand figure. And it shows a way to get some color into the costume, too. The puff across the front is in a different color from the rest of the hat.

Another spring hat that can be worn with the winter coat is shown, too—one of those with the narrow brim that fits the back of the neck closely and lifts up in front.

Either of these, made in straw or a combination of straw and fabric, is new looking and wearable on the stormiest day.

Colored Dresses

The fashionable bright colored or two-colored dress is something else that goes well with the dark winter coat and keeps the spring atmosphere at the same time.

For a Cold Easter

Wear something of the type of the dress sketched at the right even under your fur coat, and you can't help feeling Easter-y. Sleeves and upper part of the bodice are light. The skirt is dark.

Or if you feel there's too much light color in this, there are scores of other two-color dresses, quite as much in fashion, with just contrasting yokes and cuffs, or with contrasting scarfs and girdles.

A bright colored dress—all one color—will do wonders toward putting you in a spring mood on a cold Easter. Provided, of course, it has new spring details.

No—certainly nobody need feel she has to stay at home on Easter if her new spring coat is too light to wear. Not when there are hats and dresses like these that are fashionable.

Make-Believe -:- By Faith Baldwin

too great, too sudden joy, followed immediately by devastating disappointment, terror, and doubt had completely unsettled his never too steady nerves. Tomorrow then—

And for the first time in years he began to look ahead to tomorrow; not with confident secure happiness of course, yet with some measure of happiness. At least he would see her, touch her hand, and hear her voice; at least, whatever h..d been lost to him, she was restored to him, she was under his roof.

Downstairs Doctor Mathews was recounting the story he had told Travers to the two women; and Mary Lou was br·athing more freely, because her ordeal had been postponed a little longer.

"Do you remember the names of the people with whom Delight Harford lived?" Doctor Mathews asked Mrs. Lorrimer.

"It's all down here," she told them, "I procured every tiniest detail from Travers when he was able to tell me, so that I could instruct and inform the London agents as accurately as possible."

For another hour t·ey sat there, reading her notes and discussing them, while Mrs. Lorrimer supplemented them with descriptions given her by her son. And so Mary Lou learned her own story.

Delight Harford had been born in New York of American parents. When she was four years old her mother had divorced Harford and had taken the child to England, on a visit to distant cousins, and had remained there. Shortly before the war Mrs. Harford had married a German she had met while traveling in Switzerland and, on Delight's refusal to live with, or even speak to, the new stepfather, her mother, now Mrs. von Koch, had gone to Dresden, leaving Delight with the relatives. Mr. Harford had died some time before, and had left Delight a small legacy, enough to pay her board and lodging and a little over. The mother, always a rather casual and light-minded woman, had parted from her daughter without much sorrow. They had always been antagonistic, or so Delight had told Travers.

The cousins were named Lucy and Mary Morris, and were spinsters of some means, living on Green st. Delight had continued to live with them. They had both been immersed in war work at the time Travers had met the girl. Lucy, in fact, had gone to France with an ambulance corps and Mary was working as a V. A. D. in a London hospital. Delight herself had worked on a canteen and there young Travers had met her.

The background was thus established, and Mary Lou went over it again and again, until she felt she was letter perfect.

"Of course," she told Doctor Mathews and Mrs. Lorrimer, "I'll fall down, terribly, in my part, at times. He'll wonder why I haven't heard from the cousins, and don't hear from them while I am here."

"They are dead," announced Doctor Mathews, with a gesture denoting wholesale slaughter, "and that is why you came to America as a companion, hoping to find work an" perhaps some American relations of your father's."

"What about Delight's—I mean, my mother?" asked Mary Lou, seriously.

"Dead, too!"

Mary Lou chuckled, in spite of herself.

"Oh, no!" she said, earnestly, "not quite so funereal, Doctor Mathews. Please!"

"Permanently estranged then," Mrs. Lorrimer suggested, "she having stayed with the German husband whom you disliked anyway, and you having such strong English sympathies. How would that do?"

"It will have to do!" sighed Mary Lou.

A little while later Doctor Mathews left. Mrs. Lorrimer and Mary Lou dined alone in the beautiful paneled dining room, and after dinner, while Mrs. Lorrimer went upstairs to say good night to her son, Mary Lou wandered about the formal drawing room and music room and looked at books and pictures and wondered if she would ever become used to such luxury and beauty. Presently Mrs. Lorrimer joined her again.

She Acts Foolish Over Boy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

There is a certain boy I care an awful lot for. In fact, I think I care more for him than he does for me; at least he doesn't show it as much. Although I know he is the kind that doesn't let any girl know he cares a lot for her. When I am out with him, he treats me perfectly fine; anywhere I care to go, suits him. But sometimes when he promises to call, he doesn't and sometimes he stands me up on a date. I know I love this boy because I can't possibly enjoy any other boy's company. So therefore I prefer not making any other dates. Should I continue to act so foolish over this boy? Do you think I'll ever meet another I could learn to care as much for? I am nineteen years old.

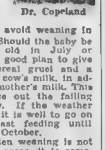
LONELY.

Dear Lonely: It seems to me from your letter that you realize yourself this young man is taking up too much of your thought and attention. There's a terribly cruel law of life to the effect that we don't value the thing we're dead sure of as much as that about which we're less certain. Without being in the least unkind or capricious to the young man, can t you contrive to make him do a little guessing? Sometimes go out with someone else.

Changing Baby's Diet

By DR. COPELAND.

IT IS too bad that the weaning of a child is often made more difficult than is necessary. For the sake of the mother and child, it should be accomplished as gradually and easily as possible. Under normal conditions, the weaning process should be begun at about the eighth or ninth month. It should be ended by the twelfth month.



Dr. Copeland

It is best to avoid weaning in hot weather. Should the baby be nine months old in July or August, it is a good plan to give fruit juice, cereal gruel and a little modified cow's milk, in addition to the mother's milk. This plan will piece out the failing natural supply. If the weather continues hot, it is well to go on with the breast feeding until September or October.

Though sudden weaning is not advised in all cases, it is sometimes necessary. Should the mother have a chronic disease of some sort, or develop an acute disease of a serious nature, weaning must be resorted to immediately.

In cases of sudden weaning, the substituted food should be very weak in the beginning. As the infant becomes accustomed to cow's milk, the strength of the food may be increased. This increase should be gradual, because sudden and radical changes in the baby's diet are undesirable. Your doctor will decide this question.

Cow's milk, modified in accordance with the formula prescribed by the doctor, is first given the baby only occasionally. The new feedings should replace not more than two or three daily nursings in the beginning.

Some physicians recommend giving the milk from a small cup. Of course, drinking from a cup does away with the tiresome work of sterilizing nipples and bottles. However, your own physician can be trusted to give you good advice in this matter.

If the milk agrees with the baby after one week's trial, the doctor will increase the strength of the formula. Such changes should be gradual until the maximum milk content is reached.

Preparing the feedings requires exact care. There must be nothing slipshod or careless in this matter.

LOS ANGELES, April 3—The Masquers' Club is to Hollywood what the Lambs' Club is to New York. All of the screen and stage folk out here of any importance belong. Naturally, the Masquers have discovered many people out of work in the profession, so arrangements are now being made to lend a helping hand by making a series of short reels.

Through a deal with RKO-Pathe whereby the film company finances and releases six two-reel comedies and the club furnishes the actors, directors and writers, a fund will be established to take care of those in need. The first picture to be made under the Masquers-RKO - Pathe auspices will be "Strong Hearts and Willing Hands" and Louella O. Parsons

THE MILLIONS of interested readers who grabbed the daily papers for news of the sunken submarine S51 a few years ago are going to see how it all happened. William Haines' next is to be the story of this very S51, and it will be called "Pig Boats." Comdr. Edward Ellsburg who superintended or, let us be more nautical, was in command during the raising of the submarine, has written the story.

I SUPPOSE actresses work hard to get their scenarios at night, but I doubt if any of them work harder than Ruth Chatterton. I have had luncheon with Ruth three times within the last ten days and each time she has been terribly concerned about her next picture. She has finally decided to make "Laurels and the Lady" for Paramount as her next picture. It is Leonard Merrick's story and Samson Raphaelson is writing the adaptation. Ruth has very definite ideas about the characters she portrays and she always has plenty of excellent suggestions to offer.

BIG FILMS ON STATE CARD

Manager Joseph H. Brennan of Loew's State is enthusiastic over arrangements just made by the New York executives of Loew's circuit, giving the state a lineup of April entertainment which has all the promise of being quite out of the ordinary.

So exuberant is Mr. Brennan over the current month's bookings that he is calling it "Loew's April Shower of Hits," which starts its outpouring of special features with a big Easter holiday week show in observance of National Players' and Patrons' Jubilee Week. The headline feature for this week will be the initial popular priced engagement in Boston of Charlie Chaplin in "City Lights."

On Friday, April 10, the second of the "shower of hits" will be Norma Shearer in "Strangers May Kiss." The fourth will be The Front Page.

Dancers in Program

The pupils of Miriam Winslow School of the Dance will be presented in a program, "The Review of the Dance," in Jordan Hall on Tuesday evening, April 14.

IF CERVANTES' "Don Quixote" knocked the spots out of knighthood, Will Rogers' "A Connecticut Yankee," at the Metropolitan, revives ye ancient spirit of chivalry for 75 minutes of screen fun. The matchless Will o' the Wit jousts with his trusty lasso pitted against the storied lance, and gallops home the victor, dragging his armored victim behind him. All of which means that Mark Twain's classic has been tailored over to meet the needs of the Jazz Age, the movie burlesque proving a sure-fire laugh provoker.

The changes are so many that the picture were more truthfully titled "Will Rogers at the Court of King Arthur." For the commedian is never the Yankee from New England, but is always the cowpuncher from Oklahoma; but such are the "gags" furnished him, and those created by Will as he rambles on, and such is his power over the spoken word that his film is of the merriest variety. Rogers does a great job throughout. He makes it his picture, which is fair enough, for being what he is among the knights of humor. The same old Will, and as invigorating as old wine in old bottles.

The highly modernized version of the Twain tale is deftly directed by David Butler. The settings are excellent, and the photography generally good. Yes, you may laugh at Will Rogers, and know the world laughs with you.

THE BILL IS the best balanced at the theater in a long time. For the stage show is likewise very entertaining. The revue is Winging Home," and among its highlights are three lassies who show cleverness in their acrobatics, a classy bird act, and a dozen bright dancing girls. The headline attraction is Nick Lucas, the "crooning troubadour," who had the audience by his ears for 20 minutes or more.

LEATRICE JOY KEITH-BOSTON HEADLINER

The screen star, Leatrice Joy, is making a personal appearance next week at the Keith-Boston, where she is heading the holiday vaudeville bill at that house. Once a year or so, the vivacious Miss Joy takes a flier into vaudeville, having proven definitely some time back that her voice is as good as the best of them.

Unlike some, who consider duty well done if they exhibit only their good looks on a tour, Miss Joy exerts herself to entertain. She has a very pleasing soprano voice, and will present this week a series of song characterizations and impressions.

The charming Leatrice was born and reared in New Orleans, and made her debut in motion pictures with the Nola Film Company in her native city. After a brief session in one-reel comedies she went to California, securing an engagement with a stock company. After months of hard work her talents won in "Bunty Pulls the Strings," "Ace of Hearts" and other productions.

Gala Bill Next Week at the Bowdoin Square

One of the most elaborate bills ever offered in the Bowdoin Sq. will begin next Sunday. This is to be known as Players' and Patrons' Jubilee Week, with nine vaudeville acts and three picture features. The Bowdoin management is cooperating with this observance, which is nation-wide from coast to coast.

Woolsey's Next

Robert Woolsey is to be starred by RKO in "Going, Going, Gone," an original by Al Boasberg which goes into production this week. Anita Louise will be the feminine lead and John Darrow the romantic juvenile lead.

"Queer People"

Leo McCarey, who directed Gloria Swanson's latest picture, "Obey That Impulse," has been signed to direct "Queer People," story of Hollywood by Carroll and Garrett Graham.

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Why Whole Land Mourns Passing of Knute Rockne ↑ ↓ Standard Bearer of American Boy. Apostle of Right

BRUIN CUBS ARE CARRYING ON

A FOOTBALL coach of a Middle Western college dies and a great nation goes in mourning . . . From Washington, Mr Hoover, President of the United States, telegraphs his sympathy to the widow . . . Mayor James Michael Curley of Boston was among the first to send condolences . . . Big men in every walk of life follow suit . . . Not since Theodore Roosevelt died has the great American nation paid such a whole-souled heart-felt tribute . . . The name, Knute Rockne, is on every tongue . . . Grief and honest grief—for his passing fills every heart.

MAYOR CURLEY.

Is THIS an argument for or against over emphasis of football? . . . Even the reformers can't stop the world from wearing a footpath to the door of a genius like Knute Rockne . . . A good football coach is worth no more, perhaps less, than a good professor . . . But a truly great coach and builder of character like Knute Rockne is worth more than a university president . . . America needs a flock of Rocknes to counteract the effects prohibition and the attendant evils are having on the youth of the nation . . . Gangster and racketeer films, magazines, stories flood the land . . . It takes a Rockne to head the American boy on the right trail.

We are all hero worshipers . . . Old as well as young . . . Hero worship plays a prominent part in the development of a child . . . There are many, many things which induce a boy figuratively to worship false gods . . . Glance over the average newsstand these days . . . Gruesome histories of Al Capone, depicting page after page of horrible murders . . . Gangster and guerilla magazines galore . . . Crime, scandals fill the newspapers . . . Think of some of the films that have been flashed to the average moving picture house . . . Do these point youth in the right direction? . . . It is easy to understand why America needs Knute Rockne and why the great American nation mourns his passing.

It so happens that the football coach from the Middle West was a great builder of men as well as football teams . . . Knute Rockne was a tremendous force for good . . . He was an inspiration and a standard bearer for the great American boy . . . The child is father to the man . . . From the children of today come the leaders of tomorrow . . . You can't over-emphasize Knute Rockne . . . The danger is under-emphasizing them . . . The tribute the American people are paying Knute Rockne is a deserved one . . . A great Apostle of Right has gone . . . It will be long before we look upon his like again.

THE KING is dead! Long live the king! The Big Bear has been slain by the Red Devils of Canada, but the Bruin Cubs carry on. The defeat of the Bruins by Les Canadiens is a thing of the past. The present is here with the Little Bear having a glorious chance to triumph where the Big Bear failed. Until the Bruin Cubs are put out of the running by the Springfield Indians Boston still has a chance of copping a hockey championship. A minor league title is better than none.

PAUL RUNGE

Is Boston ripe for another major league hockey team? Boston hockey fans answered "yes" with a reverberating roar in the Boston Garden last Wednesday night when 15,500 of them—a new minor league hockey attendance record—turned out to see the Bruin Cubs ride roughshod over the Springfield Indians in the fourth game of the Can-Am series for the Bonnell Cup.

That was the answer Rob hockey enthusiasts gave to the second major league hockey setup. It was pointed out in FANNING of Tuesday the present professional hockey league layout is all wrong. Mawruss, all wrong, and so is the weird system of Stanley Cup playoffs. The pronounced drift towards twin majors in hockey at any time may turn into a landslide. It cannot come any too quickly for the Boston hockey fans.

By the time the next hockey season rolls around Boston either will have two teams in the National Hockey League, the same as New York and Montreal, or there will be another major hockey league to which Boston will be represented.

As was said in Tuesday's Fanning the time has come to raise either the Canadian-American or the international hockey circuits to major league ranking, or else form another major league out of the amalgamation of these two present minor leagues.

A second major hockey league would do away with the present weird system of deciding the world's hockey championship. It would provide a real worlds hockey series along the same lines the worlds series in baseball is conducted.

RIGHT NOW the brand of hockey played in the Can-Am circuit compares favorably with the play in the National Hockey League. Fred Beatty and other minor leaguers have jumped right out of the Can-Ams to star in the major league. Paul Runge, Alvie Wilson and others are ripening. They're about ready for the Big Show. The 15,500 fans that paid to see the Cubs and the Indians last Wednesday night saw just as fast and thrilling hockey as was furnished by the Bruins and Les Canadiens, albeit the kids lacked the masterly skill and finesse displayed by Shore, Owen, Weiland, Morenz, Joliat and the better known and publicized major league stars.

ALVIE WILSON

If anything there is more pep and dash to the Can-Am brand of hockey than there is to the National. The players in the Can-Am circuit are younger, more ambitious, more willing to take chances. From first to final clang of the gong the Can-Am kids figuratively "play their heads off."

You will not see the finesse, strategy, team play and science in the Bruin Cubs' play you see uncorked by the Bruins, but you see more slam-bang, knock-down-and-drag-out, cockle-of-the-heart-warming "whiney."

After all that is what the fan and fanny in the stands—and don't forget Kipling said a mouthful when he said the female of the species was more deadly than the male—want, the biff-bang type of hockey. The experts and a small percentage of the fans may appreciate skill and finesse, but the average spectator likes hockey with the bark on. They want their thrills. The biff-bang game is more productive of heart thumpers than is the scientific.

THE NEW Notre Dame Stadium almost certainly will be renamed the Rockne Stadium, now. . . . They wanted to give it Knute's name last fall, but the great coach opposed it. . . . Rockne's real monument is every football field in the land. . . . Walter Camp developed football for the colleges. . . . Knute Rockne transferred the game to the people.

The Bruin Cubs trek to Springfield tomorrow for the fifth game of the Can-Am championship series tomorrow night. Hope the Cubs have better luck than the Big Bear did in his trek to Montreal.

If the Cubs win tomorrow night they win the championship. If they lose the two teams will come back to Boston for the deciding game on Tuesday. Hockey still is with us. Baseball just around the corner.

Here is the late KNUTE ROCKNE and his chief aide, HARTLEY "HUNK" ANDERSON. Who probably will take over the helm at Notre Dame. Boxer Kills Mate With Dagger

The bout started as a friendly match in a gymnasium rigged up at the home of Regino Luna, who was arrested for the crime.

He said he was so much infuriated at being on the point of receiving a knockout that the decision of the referee, shortly after presented the result of a temptation to be unjust. The victim was Heriberto Soria, boxer.

Heilman Hopes to Join Reds Soon

Cincinnati, April 3 (INS)—Harry Heilman, the veteran Detroit outfielder who for two years was unable to play baseball because of arthritis left the Tigers and was given his unconditional release, yesterday.

Heilman said today he hoped he will return to the game earlier than predicted when the Reds started training

O'Kelley and King May Battle Again

Harry Kelley announced today he has received an offer for Con O'Kelley heavyweight, to meet King Levinsky in a return bout at the Chicago Stadium. Kelley won a close decision over Levinsky in their first bout at the Arena the other night. The majority of the fans felt the decision was unjust.

Kelley has already received an offer for Con to battle Tony Galento at Jersey City.

LUTZE LOSES THRILLING STRUGGLE

By JACK CONWAY

Ed George, wrestling king, is a great champion. He proved this fact to 14,000 fans who saw him conquer Nick Lutze in a thrilling battle at the Arena under the direction of Paul Bowser.

George won two out of three falls. He secured the first toss in 16m. 4s. with a flying head scissors. The second fall went to Lutze in 23m. 21s., his famous reverse back fall sending the champion crashing to the canvas.

George successfully defended his title won by him when he secured the third and deciding fall in 14m. 14s. A reverse back fall and slam decided the issue.

Also on the program, Lutze was disqualified in favor of the men when the tussle ended. He also gained the distinction of being the first man to score a fall against George since the latter lifted the title from

RHYNES' INJURY IS SLIGHT

Louisville, Ky., April 3 (AP)—An X-ray examination completed here today revealed that Hal Rhyne, Boston Red Sox shortstop, suffered only a bad bruise when he was struck on the head by a batted ball here yesterday.

Phil Troy, secretary of the club, announced the findings of the examination and said Rhyne would accompany the Red Sox to Columbus, O., today.

Rhyne was rendered unconscious in practice when a ball batted by Ed Walsh, Jr., Louisville pitcher, struck him. At first it was believed his skull was fractured.

The Colonels had completed their fielding practice and the Red Sox went out for theirs, just before the start of the game. Most of the Louisville players had left the field when Walsh decided he would hit one more to the outfield . . .

The Red Sox infielders had taken their regular positions and Coach Rudy Hulswitt had batted down a grounder to Jack Rothrock, who threw to Bill Sweeney.

In accordance with the usual custom, Sweeney threw to Rhyne, who ran over to take the ball at second base. As he raced to the bag there was a rifle-like crack that could be heard all over the field. The next instant Rhyne was flat on the ground, his legs kicking in the air. Manager John Collins was the first to rush out to render him aid.

He lifted up Rhyne's head and there was a pool of blood under it. He called several other players and Rhyne, unconscious, was carried into the clubhouse. The Louisville officials then called the club physician, Dr. Witherspoon, who ordered his removal to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Dr. Witherspoon administered a sedative to quiet the nerves and ease the pain. He ordered that nobody except Manager Collins be allowed to see him until it was determined how severe the injury is.

Boston Polo Team Wins in N. Y. Play

New York, April 3—The Commonwealth Polo Club of Boston went two extra periods to defeat the 124th Field Artillery from Illinois, 8½ to 8, in the second round of the class C national indoor tournament. A foul by Hammond of the 124th gave the decision to Commonwealth near the close of the second extra five-minute period.

The Allehurst Polo Club of New Jersey went into the class D finals by defeating the Cornell Polo Club of Ithaca, N. Y., 7 to ½, in a semi-final game. Allehurst qualified to meet the Fort Sheridan, Ill., team in the final.

Sutter and Vines Win at New Orleans

New Orleans, April 3 (AP)—Clifford Sutter of New Orleans and Ellsworth Vines of Pasadena, Cal., today won the semi-finals doubles match over Don Murray and Maurice Bayon of New Orleans, 8—6, 6—3, 6—1, and advanced to the doubles finals in the New Orleans Country Club invitation tennis tournament.

Step Up, Fans, and Bat Out a Good Line

By THE LIMERICK EDITOR

One Seibold, a pitcher of parts,
Wins 'most every time that he starts
And when Harry the great
Steps up to the plate

This is limerick No. 3 in the Boston Evening American's record-breaking contest for tickets to the opening Red Sox and Braves games.

Answers to this one must be received not later than midnight Thursday, April 5, and awards will be announced on Saturday, April 11.

The winner will receive four grand stand tickets for the third game of the series between the Braves and Brooklyn Robins at Braves Field on April 16.

The second place winnner will be given two grand stand tickets for the same game and those contributing the six next best answers will each be awarded one grand stand seat.

Be Sure to Read Contest Rules

Judging from the hundreds of answers to the first limerick which have already been received, many of the fans aren't as familiar with the rules of the contest as they ought to be.

Many of the answers which have come to our attention lack either the sender's name or address or both. They may have been on the envelope but that isn't enough. The answers are all removed and the envelopes thrown away before the judging starts.

So, everybody, be sure to write your name and address plainly on paper inside the envelope.

These reminders, however, apply to the minority, to date. The majority has done a fine job and the contest editor is bound to spend many sleepless nights trying to decide the winners.

The fourth limerick will be printed tomorrow. That will be for tickets for the fourth and last battle between the Tribe and Dodgers at the Wigwam on Saturday April 18.

Next week there will four more limericks on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday for the four games between the Red Sox and New York Yankees at Fenway Park on April 22, 23, 24 and 25.

Keep all these dates in mind so you won't miss any of the tests and remember, 12 tickets will be awarded daily.

Address your letters to the Limerick Editor, Boston Evening American, Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass.

And don't forget, if you prefer writing a complete limerick about any of the Braves, Red Sox, Yankees or Robins to filling in the last lines of those appearing in the paper it is perfectly o. k. Your efforts will receive every consideration and you will stand as good a chance of winning as the next one.

The contest is open to every man, woman and child in New England, with the exception of employes of the Boston Evening American their families and relatives.

ENGLISH LOSE TRACK STAR

London, April 3 (INS)—Because of a business assignment in Rhodesia, Robert M. N. Tisdall, finest all-round athlete produced by Great Britain in a generation, will be absent from the Olympic games to be played in Los Angeles in 1932.

Tisdall, president of the Cambridge University Athletic Club, recently won four events in less than half an hour at a meet against Oxford at Stamford Bridge. He captured the 120-yard hurdles, the long jump, the shot-put and the quarter-mile dash.

These successes were achieved with 20 degrees of frost on the ground and in a snowstorm. Tisdall did not even have time to put a sweater over his shoulders between the events.

BRUIN STAR PROVED HIS ABILITY

CHAPTER 4

This is the fourth in a series by Bill Grimes, Boston Evening American sports writer, on thrilling experiences of ice stars. In today's article Grimes tells of George Owen, the outstanding American star of the Canadian sport.

Thrills in the life of George Owen have been so numerous that it would take a full volume to write them.

For George was a nine-letter man at Harvard and regarded as one of the foremost college athletes in the world before he had any thoughts of entering professional hockey.

Three years of brilliancy in football, baseball and hockey for the Crimson varsity teams gave Owen enough vibrations up and down the spinal column to last him the rest of his lifetime.

But George discloses that all the long runs he made on the gridiron, all the homers he clubbed out and the many valiant dashes that he made down the ice while wearing a Crimson uniform were overshadowed by his greatest thrill—that night he donned the regalia of the Boston Bruins.

That was in January, 1928. George had decided to turn pro after some brilliant work with the University Club. Owen loved to play hockey and the financial attachment wasn't to be scoffed at—although it didn't mean a great deal in the conversion of Owen to pro ranks.

Players Told Owen the Perils of Play

George sat in the dressing room that night just before his first pro game a bit fidgety, despite the hundreds of times that he had former-ly been in similar circumstances.

The Bruins players, who warmed quickly to the smiling college boy, gave him fatherly advice. They told him to take it easy, to be careful to keep his head. The players on the other team always took a newcomer "over the bumps" the first.

They wanted to strip him of cockiness right away, and one making his debut, usually was pretty well banged about by the time he had learned his first lesson. These admonitions gave him a right to be slightly nervous.

George was as defense. Just as his mates had warned, Owen was hit very hard and often. The wings crashed him, legally, at every opportunity. But George didn't wilt a bit. He took everything they had with a smile.

Soon he became acclimated to the fast company and made a rally or two up the ice. By the end of that game he was sure of himself—positive that he had made good.

Owen Gets Big Kick Out of Every Game

There are no tales to be told about Owen such as there are about Eddie Shore, Art Ross and other veterans. The days of rough and tumble hockey, it seems, have gone. No longer do the hospitals do a rushing business when a hockey game is played. But George gets a kick out of every game he plays, every goal he sinks, each time he can assist the Bruins to victory. And the public does, too.

Within two years Owen has blossomed into a star. He is regarded by many Bruins followers as the greatest of that hockey team that makes its home in the North Station rink. He has the ability to come through in a pinch.

He gives the team a fighting world—keeps the morale high at all stages. Owen always smiles whether he has been knocked down or has knocked somebody else down. It "gets" the crowd. He has come to be known as "Bull Moose," a towher of strength. Opponents bounce off him like tacklers did when he raced with a football under his arm.

Owen Has Makings of Great Player

The former Harvard boy, if he does not retire, will probably be one of the greatest hockey players of all times. For he is a great offensive as well as defensive player. He carries a wicked shot that fairly sizzles as it loops off his stick.

This writer saw Owen win a game from the Blackhawks this past season with a shot from beyond the defense points. The puck was flicked with Owen's full strength behind it. The goalie got his pads in front of the shot. But there was so much impetus behind it that it trickled into the nets. Typical of Owen's shooting ability.

YALE CAPTURES POLO CROWN

New York, April 3—The Yale polo team defeated Harvard, 10 to 7, to win the 1931 intercollegiate indoor title.

The victory gave Yale its fifth championship in the nine years the event has been contested and their first since 1926.

Yale riders scored three goals in the opening period. They pushed in four more in the second chukker to stand only a half-goal behind at the intermission, and tied the score at the end of the third period.

So closely was the Harvard trio ridden that it counted only twice, once by Gerry in the opening period and again by Harry Nicholas in the final minutes of the match.

Bowie Winner Pays $22.90 for $2 Bet

Bowie Race Track, Md., April 3 (US)—Pegg's Pride, ridden by C. Pegg, was a great "hunch" combination, and it went through to win the district line purse at the sweet price of $22.90 for $2. Morsel, the odds-on-favorite, finished second and Essare third.

Jimmy Burke rode Morsel and he staged a very incompetent exhibition of jockeyship. Up the back stretch he ran along the rail and in a nice pocket. When he managed to get through just before he turned into the stretch Burke was forced to swing to the outside to clear Essare. In the meantime Pegg's Pride had footed in front and was whirling along speedy enough to outrun Morsel.

"Met" Club Plans for Coming Season

Metropolitan Driving Club held its spring dinner in the clubhouse on the Charles River Speedway, Brighton, last night, with Walter E. Newbert as toastmaster. About 200 members attended.

Plans for the coming season were discussed. It was announced that the first big affair of the club will be the horse show, to be held late in May.

Lutze Gives George Plenty of Trouble

Gus Sonnenberg at Los Angeles last December.

Sonnenberg, accompanied by his bride of a few weeks, was at the ringside. Gus was anxious to get a close-up of George and Lutze in action as he feels he may later be called upon to meet these men.

Asked for an opinion on George after the bout, Sonnenberg said:

"Do you think you could defeat him now?" I persisted.

"I believe I can beat George," answered Gus. "Maybe I'll get another shot at him. If I do, I'll win back the title. You know I promised to do so for Mrs. Sonnenberg."

I understand that Gus has told his brids he will retire and enter business when he regains his lost championship. He wants to be another Tunney and retire with the title.

George Took Advantage of Ropes During Match

George took full advantage of the ropes when hard pressed by the colorful Lutze. He would wiggle along the canvas until he got outside of the ropes. The referee would then halt festivities and the big fellows shape off again.

The rival grapplers set a dizzy clip in the early stages of the contest. They had been wrestling only seven minutes when Lutze hurled George through the ropes.

A minute later Lutze had George in a bad way from the effects of an arm lock. The champion crawled under the ropes to safety while the crowd booed his tactics.

Lutze kept pressing his advantage at every opportunity. George was on the defensive most of the time. Suddenly the champion opened a furious attack, scored with a flying head scissors and gained the first fall in 16m. 42s. It was a splendid piece of wrestling on George's part.

It was a desperate, determined Lutze who came back to the mat after a rest. He weakened George with a spread eagle hold. He then fastened on an inside crotch hold and slammed the champion to the canvas six times. George finally worked his way to the ropes and safety.

The youthful Californian continued to drive forward. He counted with his famous reverse back fall, but George broke away just as he was about to be pinned.

Lutze Shaken Up by Fall From Ring

The action was rapid when wrestling was resumed. Each took reckless chances in an effort to win. During one of the wild scrimmages, Lutze went through the ropes to the floor of the Arena. This fall shook him up considerably.

George resorted to football tactics. He butted Lutze in Sonnenberg style. He also scored with a couple of flying tackles, but Nick broke away from them.

The show played to a capacity crowd of 14,000 and $30,000 in receipts. Paul Bowser estimated that 6000 fans were unable to witness the match on account of the limited seating capacity of the Arena.

Count Zarynoff Victor Over Boris Demetroff

The Count has been matched to meet Pat McKay at the Arena on next Thursday night. McKay previously went 15 minutes to a draw with George McLeod.

YALE BOXERS IN TITLE TOURNEY

Capt. Nicholas Del Genio, 147 pounder, and John S. White, 118 pounds, have informed Bill Kenney they will compete.

Del Genio has proved a star in college matches at Yale. He is the classiest ring star to represent Old Eli since Eddie Eagan was in his prime.

The Nova Scotia and Montreal boxers, who will battle for honors in the title tourney, will arrive in the Hub today. They will finish their training at a local gym.

TWO CANADIENS IN HOSPITAL

Montreal, April 3—With two of their players left behind in a hospital, Les Canadiens will meet the Blackhawks in Chicago tonight in the first game of the series for the Stanley cup and the world's hockey championship.

Leduc may be able to play when the series shifts back to Montreal next week, but Mondou is believed out of the playoffs.

Howie Morenz, star Canadien center, has a bad cut on his face, and Sylvio Mantha, a wing, carries a bump the size of a hen's egg on the back of his head.

Two games will be played in Chicago, the next on Sunday night. Then the teams will come to Montreal to complete the series, which is best three games out of five.

Hornsby Gives Jess Petty His Release

Los Angeles, April 3 (INS)—Jess Petty, veteran southpaw, acquired last season from the Pirates of Pittsburgh, will be released outright today to the Los Angeles Angels, Manager Hornsby of the Chicago Cubs announced.

Petty's efforts with the Cubs were what might be termed indifferent last fall and he has been slow in rounding into form during spring training.

Dempsey in Market for Heavyweight Go

New York, April 3 (INS)—Jack Dempsey was in New York today in the role of promoter. He is seeking two outstanding heavyweights to battle in a Los Angeles ball park next month.

Dempsey said he would not reveal his plans for the bout until they shaped up more definitely.

MARION HICKOX WINS N. E. TITLE

Marion Hickox, representing the Whitinsville Community Association captured the only title event, the N. E. A. A. U. junior low board diving championship.

After leading up to the last yard in the 100-yard freestyle, Helen Toomey of the Boston Swimming Association lost by two strokes to Helen Johns of Brookline. Another close battle was staged by Barbara Greenwood of Whitinsville and Helen Deianey of the Boston Swimming Association in the 100-yard backstroke with the Whitinsville girl taking the event by a yard.

Eleanor Weeme, 12-year-old daughter of Rena Pitinoff, turned in a brilliant performance in winning the 100-yard freestyle event for girls 13 years in one minute and 24 seconds.

Pay Tribute to Rockne Over Air

Newark, N. J., April 3 (INS)—Eastern football coaches paid tribute to the memory of Knute Rockne here last night. The Notre Dame coach was praised by leaders in the coaching field in a broadcast over station WOR. Among those who spoke were Tad Jones and Mal Stevens, Yale; Lou Little, Columbia; Maj. Ralph Sasse, West Point, and Bill Roper, former Princeton coach.

MANY BONES PULLED BY REFEREES

By BILL GRIMES

Without attempting to establish an alibi for the elimination of the Bruins by Les Canadiens, the National Hockey League season cannot become a closed book, from a local viewpoint, without a review of the officiating of Mickie Ion and Bobby Hewitson, in the recent championship series.

In championships, upon which hinge the world's title, whether it is hockey, football or baseball, the officials are carefully selected and supposed to be the best available.

Before the Bruins and Canadiens started the fight for the title, Ion and Hewitson were rightfully adjudged as the best in the business. For this reason, it is impossible to conceive how they could be so far below par during the five game series.

After watching Ion and Hewitson, and especially the former, the idea that the goalkeeper is the most important cog of a hockey club is erroneous.

Years ago the old Pittsburgh Yellowjackets had a referee named Richardson, who was recognized as the greatest of all protectors of home club interests. He ran off visiting players at random and only on the rarest occasions did the Pirates fail to come through with victories.

Ion Pulled Many "Bones" in Series

In his palmiest days, Richardson was never as open to unbiased criticism as Mickie Ion during the final game of the Bruins-Canadiens series. In fact, Ion pulled enough "bones" during the five games to warrant his dismissal from the league. But he will be right back on the job next season.

In the first game, Mickie Ion and Bobbie Hewitson robbed Les Canadiens by allowing Cooney Weiland's winning goal in the overtime period. It was evident to every fair minded fan that not only had Cooney caught the puff but that Weiland's stick had been high. Ion made one of the most glaring mistakes ever seen in any sport, when he chased George Owen of the ice for hitting Howie Morenz in the face with his stick when it was plain to all that if Morenz was hit, Eddie Shore did the job, for Owen was down the ice when the accident happened.

Ion was a target for boos coming from the Boston fans. He was ridden to a fare-thee-well.

In the first game in Montreal Gus Rivers kicked the puck into the net for the goal which dissolved the 1-1 tie, and late in the third period Marty Barry duplicated Rivers' trick and the Bruins were on even terms with the Flying Frenchmen, but lost in overtime.

This game was protested by the Bruins because of Hewitson's failure to notify Manager Ross of the times after penalties. There were numerous happenings in the fourth game which brought criticism on the officials from both clubs, and especially the Canadiens, but they faded out as soon as Ion began to do his stuff last Wednesday night in the Forum.

ROCKNE ONCE THREATENED TO LICK CAPTAIN

METHOD OF DEALING WITH 'STARS' SHOWED ABILITY IN HANDLING MEN

This is the second instalment of the thrilling and impressive life story of Knute Rockne, the world's most famous football coach, who was killed in an airplane crash. It is written by Warren Brown, noted sports writer of the Chicago Herald-Examiner and lifelong personal friend of Rockne. Mr. Brown's interesting narrative will continue daily until he has unfolded his brilliant portrayal of Rockne and his achievements.

By WARREN BROWN

Copyright, 1931, Chicago Herald and Examiner. Distributed by Universal Service, Inc.

Reviewers of the career of Knute Rockne agree, for the most part, that his career really began on the afternoon when he caught all those passes flipped his way on the "plains" at West Point by Gus Dorais.

This was the introduction to the Eastern football world of the forward pass that has been identified so closely ever since with Rockne and with Notre Dame.

Nothing like it had been seen in those parts before. And nothing like the 35-13 victory Rockne, Bo-ras, Eichenlaub and the others of that early edition of the "Fighting Irish" scored over Army, in this, the first meeting of the two, had been anticipated, nor even suspected.

Actually, the impression that this was the start of the Rockne career was only partly correct. The site was right, it was on the "plains" of West Point that the Rockne career, as the whole athletic world has come to know it, began. But the time was a trifle premature. Four years so, in fact.

Becomes Assistant

In those days, football teams, and especially those at Notre Dame, did not have the luxury of a coach for the ends, a coach for the tackles and guards, a coach for the centers, a coach for the backs, and a head coach.

They had, at Notre Dame, Harper—and Rockne.

With some of the members of the teams, players who were in action in the Harper-Rockne period, and who held over when Rockne was made head coach in 1918, I have discussed frequently the personality of the young Rockne, as coach.

"He was a busy fellow," all agreed. And it was not without reason, for Rockne coached ends, tackles, guards and centers. He doubled as trainer, and probably did some other duties in his spare time.

Even in those days he was preparing against the time when he was to be called upon to be all things to all people everywhere, or no one, description seems to fit a man who was at once a coach, man of family, a writer, radio broadcaster, public speaker, broker, automobile sales stimulator, motion picture producer, director and actor, and—but this, I trust, will make the point.

Rockne, then, was a busy fellow.

Harper, the head coach, was an easy-going sort. He still is. It is difficult to conceive Harper exhorting his football squad to the super-human efforts that coaches are supposed to get out of their men. That wasn't Harper's method.

Rockne, an end, was once good enough to attract the eye of Walter Camp, who was then abroad in the land, the sole holder of rights to dare pick the mythical "all-Americans."

He has always had a kindly feeling for guards.

"Dumb and Strong"

Asked once about his requirements for material, he replied:

"I like 'em dumb and strong. If they're just dumb, I make guards out of them."

Rockne, since there is no evidence to the contrary, is assumed to have gone about his manifold duties in more or less uneventful fashion until the season of 1917, which happened to be his last as assistant coach.

In fact, the war year, Jimmy Phelan, now coach at the University of Washington, was captain, up until the time he left to join the forces of the United States.

It happened that the regular squad that year contained a player who, as far as history goes, has not since been a member of Notre Dame teams. And lest a wrong impression gets abroad from this paragraph description, the player was not George Gipp, though he like, too, has not since been seen on any Notre Dame team.

"Heady" Player

This player thought very well of himself, and the opinion was not concurred in by the rest of the squad. Quite the reverse, in fact.

Harper decided that he would name the player captain for a game in advance of Army, and did. Notre Dame won by a lopsided score.

The Notre Dame team advanced onwards the "plains" of West Point, and Harper chose Dave Phibin as captain.

The distance separating the old football field at West Point from the dressing rooms is considerable.

After the usual Harper harangue, if any, the team dashed out towards the field—all but the ex-captain who took his own time in reaching the scene of action.

Rockne Aroused

"What's the matter with you?" he demanded.

"Oh, nothing," pouted the ex-captain.

"What's wrong?" Rockne insisted. "You sore about something?"

"Yes, I am," said the player, "I ought to be captain."

"You ought to be captain," stormed Rockne. "You ought to be given a good beating. If it wasn't for the scene we'd make, I'd start right in now. If you'll come over in back of those stands, I'll start anyhow. Get off the field!"

And the ex-captain stood not on the order of his going, but went at once, taking a seat at the end of the players' bench.

Before long the great Oliphant, the Army captain, came over to the Notre Dame bench, and asked who was Notre Dame's captain.

Harper indicated Phibin, and the latter, not caring to have any further scene, protested.

Ex-Captain Plays

The ex-captain jumped up at once and accepted the nomination.

"If it were my team, Jess," said Rockne to Harper, "I'd not let him play. No, I'd make him walk all the way back to South Bend."

If Harper made any comment, it has never been recorded.

The game, as Army-Notre Dame games have the habit of being, was furious.

The bruising crash of player against player went on. The player against whom the wrath of Rockne had been directed—in all probability for the first and last time in the Rockne career—was in the midst of the attack. Battered and bruised and bleeding—it was that kind of a game, and he kept in the fight.

Career Begins

First aid was finally needed for him.

And who was it that patched up his wounds, consoled him, if that was what he needed?

Yes, Rockne.

I don't know what the name of it was back in 1917. They call it psychology, now.

And that, I take it, is something in the way of evidence that the career of Knute Rockne began on the "plains" at West Point, all right, but began in 1917, not in 1913.

On that day, the Rockne, who hadn't changed greatly with the years, in some respects, was having entirely too much fun, catching those passes Dorais flipped him, to be bothered about starring a career. Finishing Army was the job in hand.

Harvard Plans to Hold Crew Trials

Plans to run off a series of trial races during the spring vacation period less than two weeks hence were outlined by Charley Whiteside, coach of the Har-ard varsity crews, who will at that time make certain shifts as the occasions arise to strengthen his ultimate varsity combination.

Speaking of contemplated changes, Whiteside said that the showing of William B. Bacon, stroke, and William L. Thompson, No. 7, of the Bacon crew, has been such that this pair of oarsmen are making strong bids for places in the varsity shell.

SHARKEY WILL FIGHT JUNE 3

New York, April 3 (US)—Jack Sharkey, leading American heavyweight, will make his return to the ring after an absence of a year at Ebbets Field on June 3, James J. Johnston announced.

Sharkey's opponent will be named April 15, from a list composed of Tommy Loughran, Victorio Campolo and Mickey Walker. Walker will be acceptable to the New York commission on conditions he relinquishes his middleweight championship, and this Walker is prepared to do.

Campolo is also a lively possibility, as the giant Argentinian is prepared to sever relations with the Madison Square Garden Corporation. The contract held by the Garden calls for guarantees of $20,000 and $40,000 for his next two fights, and Johnston believes the Garden will drop him rather than risk that kind of money.

Loughran Would Like to Meet Sharkey

Loughran has sent word from Chicago that he is still a free agent and that he would like to be considered for the match.

William F. Carey, president of Madison Square Garden, is expected tomorrow from Chicago, and it is believed he will formally announce the site of the Schmeling-Stribling match.

Jackie Kid Berg, junior welterweight champion, will leave Sunday for Cleveland to finish training for a bout with Billy Wallace, scheduled for a week from tomorrow. He is signed for a lightweight title contest with Tony Canzoneri at Chicago a week later.

Peabody and Beals Enter Squash Final

Charles C. Peabody and E. Maurran Beals of Tennis and Racquet Club won a final berth in the squash doubles tournament at the B. A. A. yesterday, defeating the home contingent of W. Chandler Bowditch and Ralph Stuart in four games.

Two Harvard Club pairs, Thomas Jansen and G. Holmes Perkins and Francis Hill and Guilford Stuart, will do battle in the remaining semifinal.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

The annoying irritations that you call golf troubles very often should be called golf trouble, the basic fault, whatever it is, often bringing on a whole train of bad results. Certain it is that thinking of the outcome of a shot and specializing on it while you are trying to make it will yield you pretty nearly all the golfing troubles ever invented — and you doubtless will invent a few new ones of your own. Keep in mind that each shot is first a mental projection, in which the shot clearly is foreseen, after which your sole business is the stroking of the ball. If you add to this the habit of giving your entire attention to the ball while you stroke your swing may become rather automatic, or "grooved." It is bad even to think of swinging details while swinging; in truth, almost as bad, but not quite, as thinking of the outcome of the shot while swinging. Common sense should inform you that you cannot shift or alter your swing once you have started it. Best not to think of the swing at that time.

Girl Hurler's Curves Force Ruth to Fan

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 3—Whether it was the curves in the box or the curves on the ball, Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, home run twins of the New York Yankees, were fanned by the only girl pitcher in organized baseball.

Virne Beatrice Mitchell, known as "Jackie," regular member of the Chattanooga team, is the girl who thus made history.

Jackie didn't start the game for Chattanooga. Clyda Barfoot was in the box when Combs, first man up, stepped to the plate. Combs smashed the first ball up against the fence for two bases. Lary next drove a single to center, scoring Combs, and then up came Ruth.

Barfoot was waved from the slab and out came 17-year-old Jackie, clad in regulation uniform. She had been warming up in the pen. She is a snip-nosed, blue-eyed lass, with plenty of speed in that left arm of hers—plenty, that is, for a girl. She faced the Behemoth with a half smile on her not unattractive face.

Always the gentleman, Babe gallantly doffed his cap and by a side motion of his ponderous head called the pitcheress' attention to the fact that there was a man on first. But that little thing meant nothing to Jackie. She was out to get the Babe. Ruth took his famous toe-hold and stood waiting with his war club swinging just as it always does.

Jackie wound up as if she were turning a coffee grinder (Lary could have stolen second and third before the ball left her hand, but he, too, is a gentleman), and the sphere came ambling up.

Babe took a mighty swing and missed the ball by a foot. Loud yells. The next two were wide, but the Babe claimed he couldn't see the ball because of its speed and called for a new one.

He swung again and missed and then Jackie sneaked one over the plate, while Babe politely let it go by. He was out and walked back to the bench, shaking his head. More loud yells.

Gehrig needed only three pitches to fan. He seemed to put every ounce of his Columbia beef into his swings, half turning around after each, but he surprisingly missed the ball by as much as six inches each time.

He, too, mournfully shook his head, and he went back to the bench with head down. And if the cheers that greeted Babe's strikeout were long and large, those that greeted Gehrig's exit were something much better along those lines. The delighted giggles of Jackie's girl friends and their shrill yelps rose high above the deeper toned masculine applause.

Then Jackie was called in, receiving an ovation, while Babe and Lou rushed out to shake her hand and pat her on the back and tell her that she was the real goods as a twirler.

The Yanks won the game, 14 to 4, but all the thrill was gone when Jackie departed.

Just now the stock market gives few clues of any importance with respect to the nearby trend in business. The roaming professionals stir up one group of stocks one day, another group the next and "slam" the whole list on the third day, who follow them must be nimble and agile to turn transactions into profits and most of the customers who have commissions and carrying charges to pay, are beaten at the start in the speculative game.

* * *

TRADE HORIZON SEEN CLEARING

New York, April 3—One by one the various factors which forecast probable future general business activity have been turning upward, comment on financial world in its weekly digest of business conditions today.

"Stock mill operations are holding well their gains of recent weeks. Automobile output shows another small increase, and total car loadings have increased sharply. Bank clearings (outside of New York) are up 11 per cent from the preceding week, and business failures, continuing the decline which set in toward the end of March, are down to the level of a year ago.

"All in all," concludes the digest, "the industrial skies are clearing. Improvement has been slow, but the steady advance may be regarded as grounds for gratification."

AT THE LISTENING POST

AMATEUR RADIO, out of which has grown such a giant industry, still has a place. Novices, so called in error, are nearly always found to be the heroes in time of need. Suitable homage, even decoration, is being considered as a fitting recognition of these amateurs and their performances at the time of the Viking disaster near Horse Island, off Newfoundland.

* * *

INADEQUATE means of communication, affording an opportunity for these experimenters to render invaluable service. Dispelling aid to the marooned survivors there on the tiny barren island was made possible by radio amateurs at that. Let us not speak too lightly of amateurs, in any field of endeavor.

IF YOU STAY UP real late tonight (or is it Dracula's late?) one of the weirdest of radio dramas will creep through the speaker. At 12 o'clock midnight hour of midnight, with the moon riding high, the WBZ-KDKA Players will enact a mysterious "Hour of Night" in the studios atop the Hotel Statler. John W. Holbrook plays the role of Dracula, the (in this) one adaptation of the thrilling photoplay production also making its appearance on the screen at the B. F. O. Keith theater. A distinguished cast supports the portrayal.

* * *

OWING TO THE scenic effects and visual advantages of Dracula few broadcasters have attempted to present it on the air.

NAMES IS NAMES: Margaret Anglin, actress of stage and microphone, states she is not fishing for a husband.

* * *

HUMAN APPEAL with all of its twists and turns of fancy has lately been attracted anew by court trials on the air. Prominence of characters involved legally has always excited interest in cases of greater degree, consequently the famous trials in history furnish not only entertainment, but education.

WHY DO SAILORS hire a boat when they have shore leave? What makes mail men go for walks on their day off? Then we first started this "colyum" we listened to the radio only occasionally. Now, after spending the day broadcasting and tonight away radio and breathing the very atmosphere of the thing, we go straight home and home straight to bed. Except as a taxi driver gets out his own bus and goes riding all day Sunday.

BY THE WAY, don't neglect that suggestion that's now name up at the top of this allotted space—better write it out and send it in.

EASTER GREETINGS

Social Organization

THROUGH the generosity of the public, we are able day by day to relieve want and distress, and help the needy to self-independence. We take this means of thanking these friends, old and new, who make this work possible. We extend both to those who have helped us carry on our work and to those who as yet have not experienced the joy of giving.

A Warning to America

The German-Austrian Customs Union

Europe has been thrown into a fever of excitement over an agreement between Germany and Austria to work out a customs union abolishing tariff duties between these two countries.

France pretends to see in this Austro-German tariff project the germs of an Austro-German political union, protests against it, and prepares to oppose it as a member of the League of Nations and of the League Court.

Both Germany and Austria defend the project upon the ground that the proposed tariff pact "is a defensive action against Russia, deserving the full support of Europe."

Thus far the United States is not involved in this European broil, because this country has thus far refused to join either the League of Nations or the League Court.

Thus far the Washington government has disavowed any intention of interfering in what is as yet a typical European quarrel.

Thus far the Washington government avows that its only interest in these tariff negotiations between Germany and Austria would depend upon their ultimate effect upon the most favored nation clause of our tariff treaty with Germany, made in 1925, and our tariff treaty with Austria, final action on which has yet to be taken by Austria.

There will be ample time after Germany and Austria have agreed upon the terms of their customs union for the United States, acting independently and exclusively in its own interests, to defend its tariff rights WITHOUT BECOMING INVOLVED IN THE POLITICAL QUARRELS OF GERMANY AND FRANCE OR ANY OTHER EUROPEAN NATION.

This latest European broil breaks just in time to serve new warning upon the American people and their newly-elected Congress that the Europe against which George Washington warned them in the Farewell Address is the same Europe that is entering upon a new quarrel today.

"Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the cause of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties, in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities."

Only by keeping out of the League of Nations and the League Court and minding our own business will we be able to prevent the entanglement of

"Our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor, or caprice."

Now is the time, as Germany and France renew their quarrel, for the United States to make it clear to every European ambassador and minister in Washington and every American ambassador and minister in Europe that the Franco-German-Austro quarrel is a European affair in which the United States will not meddle and with which the United States refuses to be entangled.

Visions of Beauty

Blind Man Sees for First Time

When that Philadelphia man was enabled through a surgical operation to see for the first time he was drunk with the sensation of sight. A miracle of beauty thrilled him. The first thing he saw was a flower.

The blindness from which he had suffered was hardly much worse than that afflicting millions of people with normal sight. If they really could see they would be thrilled daily with miracles of beauty.

It is the function of artists to open these eyes to the wonderment all about us. Wordsworth's poem on primroses, Corot's paintings of trees have opened countless eyes dull by "not enough seeing."

A few hundred persons note the sunset. If it were announced by cannon and a five-dollar charge were made for seeing it, a million spectators would have crowded the horsetops to look on. Happily for mankind, beauty costs nothing.

Fliers' Husbands

Husbands of noted women fliers are going to form a club. It comes as a surprise to many of us that these ladybirds had husbands at all. Men marry lady fliers because they are in love, or they think marriage is less terrifying than a lonesome old age, or in the hope the brides will settle down—which never happens.

Meantime, they've got to keep up the home somehow. Mother is up in the clouds, volplaning, smashing records, breathing from oxygen tanks, busying herself with altimeters, stabilisers and things like that. She lands on the front page twice a week, in the rotogravure every Sunday. It gives the husbands a terrible inferiority complex.

The club might help a little, if it published a bulletin. It could tell the husbands how to look fresh, bright and attractive every evening when the wife comes home from the clouds. How to make beds, order meals and make sago pudding. Even a flier's husband has his uses. He can also look after the kiddies. Mother may get the publicity, but, after all, the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world.

Kicking the Table

The cussedness of inanimate things led a New Jersey youth to end his life in sheer desperation. After wrestling with a jammed car and finding it impossible to budge it, he whipped out a revolver and shot himself.

The verdict was that he was temporarily insane at the time. But the truth is that he always lacked self-control, even in childhood. A tendency to such outbursts of anger is formed only in earlier years.

Discipline and a training in humor while he was in frocks might have saved him.

He must have been one of those ill-starred infants taught to "kick the naughty table" or "smack the wicked door" every time he collided against them and got a bump.

One shudders to think of how many thousands of youngsters are being handicapped for life by such stupid suggestions. They become just cranky.

TIME OUT

His fame came to him through success as a football coach, a maker of winning football teams. His greatness sprang from his intelligence and character. He was a sportsman of a high order. He exemplified the American genius for teamwork.

He did more to make American football a real contest of strategy than anybody else.

Rockne held that a certain amount of athletics invigorated the body, trained initiative and helped the brain—if the students had any gift for athletics at all.

Notre Dame in its winning years stood high in scholarship. Rockne had a respect for learning. He was himself an instructor in chemistry. He thought it wasn't playing the game right to neglect the proper duty of a student—to learn.

"Play the game right, boys. But remember—it's just a game."

Listen, World! :: Reading

By ELSIE ROBINSON

What Do Your Children Select?

WHAT DO your children read—WHEN YOU'RE NOT LOOKING?

"Oh, they're not very crazy about reading," you say. "Young sters nowadays—especially those of high school age—have so many school activities and sports. Not much time for reading. And—to tell you the truth—I've never really inspected their reading, but I'm sure it's all right. Adventure and detective stories, with a few nice, wholesome romances—you know, the kind of thing you and I read at 17."

Elsie Robinson

That's what you think? Well, it's undoubtedly a nice, comfortable way for a doting father or mother to think. But you might be surprised! Other parents, just as doting as you, have been.

Here are facts which may put a slight dent in your paternal complacency. Recently the Parent-Teacher Associations of San Francisco and adjacent cities decided to do a little investigation of juvenile reading.

They listed the names of 24 periodicals which are devoured as "ginger bits" by our younger set. You can see them on any newsstand.

Have you read any of these "red-hot numbers"? Neither had these San Francisco and East Bay mothers, but they hastily proceeded to do so. With the result that the district attorney of Alameda County ordered the publications banished from newsstands and stores by sundown that night.

Yes, indeed. But don't let it stop at that.

This is YOUR party, too, fond parent. Remember—these publications were not scanned by horrid "boys and girls." They were read by Nice Kids . . . girls as dainty and demure as your Rosabelle . . . boys as clean and wholesome as your Thomas Allen. They were read, giggled over, AND BELIEVED. From these salacious pages, and from movies which match them in stupidity and nastiness, these young Americans GATHERED A THEORY OF LIFE WHICH THEY ACCEPTED AS A GUIDE FOR FUTURE CONDUCT.

These boys and girls were as curious about life as you and I were at their ages. They went to those pages, to those movies, wanting to be "wised up," seeking PRACTICAL INFORMATION. THEY CAME AWAY WITH EVERY IDEAL TARNISHED. What could sermons from Mama, dear-dead-ones, like Mama, Papa and Teacher mean in the face of Inside Dope like that? Less than nothing at all.

Then we wonder "what in heck possesses these modern kids?" That's part of what possesses them. WHOSE FAULT IS IT?

The Marry-Go-Round - By Helen Rowland

The High Cost of Vanity

THE MOST expensive thing that we carry around with us is our ego—sometimes known as our vanity, and sometimes as our self-esteem.

* * *

We spend thousands of dollars for the sake of our vanity, that we should not think of squandering on mere comfort. That's why our luxuries are so much more necessary than our necessities.

* * *

When one kind of a man receives a blow to his pride or his ego he goes out and buys a few drinks and hunts up a blonde to flatter him and bolster up his morale.

* * *

Another sort of man orders his wife a box of orchids or buys her a new car, and goes home and lets the family put him in tune with himself and back on his pedestal.

* * *

A woman who wakes up with an inferiority complex rushes for the beauty parlor and has her face massaged and her hair done over a new shade.

* * *

Or she hurries down to the shops and buys a lot of clothes that she can't afford. A permanent wave, a becoming hat and a new spring ensemble can set a woman's crushed vanity or cure her sprained self-complacency more quickly and effectively than prayer or religion.

* * *

An Englishman can work off an inferiority complex by writing a letter to the London Times or snubbing his neighbors. But the American way is by spending money. We buy expensive cars, bad stock, lots of clothes that we don't need, bigger houses than we want or require. We buy fair weather friends, support grafters, live in showy hotels, tip waiters extravagantly and give parties that we can't afford—all for the sake of propping up our ego.

* * *

A few people can work off their inferiority complexes by braggadocio. By doubling their salaries and halving their failures, they manage to work up a big supply of self-esteem. Others call themselves cynics and get a big thrill of self-satisfaction by sneering at everybody else. Nothing makes a man so shine (in his own eyes) by comparison as a good hearty sneer at his fellow-men.

* * *

"When you meet a man (or woman) who lives simply, dresses carelessly or plainly, never poses, never boasts, never sneers and never tries to impress you, you have met one whose ego is either so completely submerged or so firmly entrenched that you couldn't hurt it if you aimed a machine gun at it.

But, for most of us, vanity and the ego are tormenting tyrants which keep us forever swinging between the Seventh Heaven and the Place of Torment.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, April 3—Thoughts while strolling: Keats Speed has never laid eyes on Texas Guinan. That foolish feeling after steering away from someone you think is asking alms. But who merely wants to know the time of day. Little Rango was not killed by the tiger. That was faked.

Percy L. Crosby, a Brooklyn, N. Y., boy, who made good in the city. Who remembers when the Little Club was the hottest spot in town? Marilyn Miller's "property smile." The pint sized comedian, Joe Laurie, Jr. Broadway is not the same without Louis Mann and his collar.

Derbied men who stand in front of magistrate courts, chewing cigars. Who is getting all the graft in this town? Jack Whiting and Frances Williams look alike. I can stand all day watching rabbits in a window twitch their noses. H. N. Swanson and his bride.

Those venerable "matinee boys" who indulge decently furtive peccadillos but are always home in time for dinner. Sinning like bloods. An old Winter Garden comedian running an elevator. No baseball heroes any more like Hans Wagner and Mike Donlin.

A paddock coat to me suggests a gigolo. Belle Barr, the astrologist. George Jessel looks like one of those old time comic valentines. But he's just as funny as he looks. Harry Hershfield's hair is snow white. And with a red tie he would make a grand stage gambler.

The Park avenue debutante who leads a Siamese cat on a leash. And perhaps looks about hopefully for news photographers. Always a motive star or so around the Hotel Ambassador. Floyd Gibbons won't ride in an auto that hasn't safety glass. The musing stare of tenement children.

Rarely run across those insolent West Indian hall boys any more. The chauffeurs who sport tightly waxed mustaches, highly polished puttees and wasp-waisted overcoats. The robins tug worms in the park. Scudding clouds. The hurdy gurdy grinds. Happy days are here again, hooray!

* * *

Georges Carpentier, the French fighter, is said to have suffered humiliation as the result of the kidnaping he endured with Lita Gray Chaplin. On the stage he has been razzed for not resisting the hold-up man—if any. The worst jeer came when he stepped to the footlights recently and a shrill falsetto voice screeched: "Look—the Orchid Man!"

* * *

The wife of a wealthy gentleman is afflicted with a peculiar and remote eurosis. She cannot bear the daylight and the rays of the sun are acutely agonizing. Most of the daytime she remains secluded in a darkened room, but when dusk falls she is merry and bright—often the life of the party.

* * *

* * *

And in the same show—there's no reason not to mention it is "America's Sweetheart"—a haughty bunch of ermined and orchidaceous cinema ladies warble about a night before party with the following ungrammatical insolence: "And everybody was so stinking none of the men knew who they were keeping."

Also a comic calls Shakespeare "The Bird of Avon." And speaks of "hips that pass in the night."

* * *

On a fugitive shadowy path in the upper reaches of Central Park last night a shy, sad-eyed little man timidly approached and inquired if I happened to know where he could find work. "Anything respectable." he added. He fumbled among his pockets and brought out a soiled card giving his name and address. Then, after drawing him out, he produced a clipping of a good-looking girl. "That," he said with a deal of pride, "is my daughter." Over the telephone today a producer tells me the girl makes $125 a week in his show. If she is his daughter—and I believe she is—he needs her.

Night letter: "We are beauty prize winners coming to New York. Will you send us your home address just to see if you look as funny as we imagine?"

I live in a sycamore tree in Yonkers and swing from limb to limb when approached by rangers.

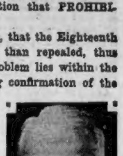
It Must Be Solved

By Bainbridge Colby

THE single element of value in the report of the Wickersham Committee was the unanimity with which its members recorded their conviction that PROHIBITION HAD FAILED.

The preponderant opinion, however, that the Eighteenth Amendment should be revised rather than repealed, thus recognizing that the solution of the problem lies within the sphere of Federal control, is a striking confirmation of the view voiced by the Hearst press, and notably by Mr. Hearst himself in his much-quoted radio address delivered long prior to the making of the Wickersham report.



BAINBRIDGE COLBY

It is fervently to be hoped that the diversity of individual recommendations by the members of the Wickersham Commission will not open up a new chapter of sterile debate and warring opinion on non-essential and secondary phases of this great problem SO URGENTLY DEMANDING A PROMPT AND RATIONAL SOLUTION.

The solution should not be sought—

—AND IT WILL NOT BE FOUND—in the naked repeal of the amendment and the restoration of control of the liquor traffic to the States. This a simple formula, but too simple. It is like "a container that does not contain the facts."

* * *

We have seen what unrestricted State action will do, in Nevada's legislation restoring wide-open gambling. And it was unrestricted State control that made possible the saloon and all of its spreading evils which finally culminated in Prohibition.

Popular support cannot be had for any proposal in which there lurks even the remotest possibility of a return of the saloon. IF IT IS RESTORED IN ONE STATE, ITS LEPROUS CONTAGION WILL SPREAD TO OTHER STATES.

To quote Mr. Hearst:

"The weakness of this plan (to restore control to the States) is that it continues all of the evils of Prohibition in the Prohibition States and inflicts some of the incidental evils of Prohibition on the other States from which lawbreakers may operate and in which they may take refuge."

* * *

Coupled with Prohibition as a social problem and inseparable from it is the fact that crime for the first time in history finds itself in the position of a SUBSIDIZED CALLING or INDUSTRY—one is almost tempted to say, institution.

The traffic in liquor is NOT stayed by the existing laws. It has merely been converted into a vicious subterranean commerce, yielding no revenue to the Government which has hitherto been able, by excise regulation, to exercise a salutary control in the interests of public health and social order.

Faced as we are with the huge national deficits in the revenue; with the prospect of new and intolerable tax burdens upon a people already overtaxed, and struggling under the weight of an unexampled commercial depression, the addition to the national revenue of a thousand million dollars per annum is not to be lightly dismissed, particularly as the restoration of efficient government supervision would be accompanied by immediate crime abatement and an expanded market for labor, now unemployed, and for the products of our fields and factories.

* * *

Assuming Federal control—AND THERE IS NO ACCEPTABLE ALTERNATIVE—we will emerge from the welter of ills that now afflict the nation only when, with frankness and clarity of thinking and of action, we decide to allow the restricted manufacture of alcoholic beverages under Federal licenses, and their distribution under a plan of regulated monopoly, which can assure proper standards in respect to quality and price and the due control of licensees.

Let us face the truth—the truth of our experience. The lesson has been painful. The cost in social retrogression and civil deterioration can hardly be calculated.

Poor Little Working Girl

By WINIFRED BLACK

Was She to Blame?

THE POOR little secretary who appropriated her employer's money has been denied a re-trial.

Poor innocent baby, she'll have to go down to prison in what they used to call the "Black Maria." with "all those horrid men."

Winifred Black

She'll have to live in a cell for months and months, and go without a looking glass, maybe, or a box of powder; and as for rouge and lipstick, oo-la-la!

And all just for using a few thousand dollars from the account of a girl who had shoals and shoals and thousands, and more thousands, and spent them like water.

And took her to parties and to concerts and on long pleasure trips, motoring, sailing and playing golf.

What did she expect?

The dear little girl had never had more than a few dollars to spend for pleasure in her life. She worked hard in a beauty shop somewhere, shampooing hair, and massaging faces and polishing nails—and along came the beautiful actress and took a fancy to the "poor working girl."

And "come along home," says she, as sweet as a peach. "Quit your marcelling and your rubbing, your polishing and your beauty parlor talk.

"Come with me and be my secretary. Answer my letters and talk over the telephone for me. Pay my bills, give my dressmaker a piece of my mind, and see that the car isn't costing too much for upkeep.

"And hire me my cook and discharge my maid for me. Tell people I've gone to South America or to visit the Akhoond of Swat, when I don't want to bother with them.

"And I'll give you my bankbooks to carry and my checkbooks to handle and I'll trust you with my secrets—and with my friends, my jewels, my business and my money, and you shall for all this:

What do you think?
